Peterson will not run

Robert Peterson, a six-year veteran of the Wilmington School Committee, told fellow board members last week he would not be seeking re-election when his second term is up in April.

"At the present time it's the right move," Peterson said of his decision. He cited personal considerations and said the fact that he can't do work for the town in a professional capacity while he's on the board also contributed to his decision.

Peterson said the decision wasn't made lightly. He explained he felt it was only fair to make his intentions known while nomination papers are being circulated.

Chairman Tony Accardi spoke on behalf of the board when he said Peterson would definitely be missed.

Democrats meet tonight

The Wilmington Democratic Town Committee meets Wednesday night at 8 p.m. to go over procedures for write-in candidates. The meeting will be held in the Fourth of July Building.

Reportedly, it takes write-in votes by five registered Democrats to place one candidate on the ballot. There is room for 35 candidates on the ballot.

Through an oversight, the slate for the Democratic Town Committee will be blank when voters go to the polls for the presidential primary on March 8. It is hoped with a united effort on the part of town Democrats, the slate can be filled.

The Town Crier learned that approximately 43 other communities neglected to submit their slates before the November 17 deadline.

Feb. 12 deadline for comment

by Arlene Surprenant

A two volume Draft Environmental Impact Report has been completed for the 384 unit Shawsheen River Estates condominium project. The project, which is being proposed for the Hopkins Street-Reed Street area, is a joint venture by Third Avenue Realty Trust and Great Brook Development Corporation.

Copies of the report have been sent to local boards, state agencies, and interested local residents. Three copies of the report are on file at Wilmington Memorial Library for public perusal.

The report was prepared for developer Jay Tighe by Daylor Consulting Group Inc. It includes a description of the project and alternatives and reportedly addresses concerns brought up by abutters and town officials at a scoping session by MEPA in September.

The report refers to impacts in the area of traffic, access, sewage disposal, water supply, wetlands, drainage, construction, and aesthetics. It includes several maps and analyses of such impacts as traffic, water, and drainage. It also contains copies of all correspondence received, to date, from officials, abutters, and other residents which were sent to the state.

Comments and concerns on the report are encouraged from all interested parties and may be addressed to Secretary James Hoyte of the Executive Office of Environmental Affairs (EOEA) until the February 12th deadline. Letters should be sent to Hoyte at his office at 100 Cambridge Street, Boston, Ma.02202 care of the MEPA Unit. Anyone who writes should include EOEA project number 6682 on all correspondence.

TV studio in Swain School

by Arlene Surprenant

The cable TV studio being proposed by the Wilmington Cable TV Access Corporation has finally found a home.

The Wilmington School Committee unanimously agreed to a request to locate the studio in the Swain School basement. According to corporation representative Charles Gilbert, advantages of the school include a central location with ample parking, the necessary dimensions, access to bathrooms and storage space, easy maintenance, the ability to close off the area for proper security, and a recently rewired room.

It was pointed out corporation members would have to pay all utility costs and look into making the building accessible to the handicapped.

For some time, the corporation had sought space in the renovated high school for the studio. But no area seemed right, largely because of the studio's size and height requirements. Gilbert said his group had received "extremely positive" response from all town boards who tried to help in the search.

Town counsel speaks Wilmington Town Counsel Alan Altman raised several issues concerning the proposed Arboretum Apartments at a hearing last Wednesday before the state Housing Appeals Committee.

Sewer hookup, local need primary issues in IMG hearing

by Arlene Surprenant

Last Wednesday's long awaited state hearing on the Wilmington Arboretum Apartments project was relatively quiet in terms of controversy and heated debate. This first of several hearings before the state Housing Appeals Committee (HAC) served to introduce members to the proposal and to Investors Management Group (IMG), which is proposing the 192 unit condominium complex off Ballardvale Street.

The IMG project was denied a comprehensive permit last summer by the Wilmington Board of Appeals. Under Chapter 774, IMG had the option of appealing that decision before HAC Chairman Murray Corman and his committee in hopes that they will overturn the local decision.

On Wednesday, the case was argued by IMG's Andrew Hier, an attorney with Csaplar and Bok, and Wilmington Town Counsel Alan Altman. Both men said they would be focusing on two main issues: whether HAC has jurisdiction over the Wilmington Water and Sewer Commission and whether the project is consistent with local needs.

Under Chapter 774, HAC is given jurisdiction over local boards and can overturn their decisions. One of the more controversial aspects of the case is that the water and sewer commissioners told IMG they couldn't tie in to the western loop of the sewer system because it didn't go along with their master plan. Commissioners said IMG could tie in to the eastern loop, but since this reportedly hasn't been built yet, IMG would have to pay the full cost, making the whole project uneconomic in their view.

Hier claimed, at the hearing, the commission is a local board answerable to the board of selectmen. Altman contended that the commission is an independent board given its authority by special acts of legislation dating back to 1926 and 1958.

On the issue of local need, Hier claimed Wilmington has a need for housing for elderly and low to moderate income families. Hier asked IMG President Phillip Sloane to review the reasons why the Ballardvale Street site was chosen for affordable housing. Sloane said it was considered buildable, accessible, least objectionable to the community, least expensive in terms of construction costs, and possessing a natural barrier in terms of mature foliage. Altman had some lighter comments of his own.

"I object (to the question) on relevancy. He's going to make a pile of money; we all know that," he said.

Altman, in turn, argued that the project was not consistent with local needs and there were some problems with the site. He pointed to "major traffic implications" with only one access road, health and safety issues, wetland concerns, and "major" sewer problems with the site.

Altman was backed by earlier comments by Rep. James Miceli, who told Corman "there are serious issues that make this an area not suitable for development." Miceli went a step further when he added Wilmington is a town "that is trying to do something about the (affordable housing) problem, maybe for the first time" and this should be taken into consideration.

During the first hour of the hearing, Altman made a motion to dismiss because abutters allegedly weren't given adequate notice that the proposal was changed from the original 204 unit garden style apartment plan to a 192 unit condo project under the HOP program. Corman said he would take the motion under advisement. The rest of the four hour hearing was devoted to some background on the proposal and the appeals board decision and Sloane's association with IMG and his view of the project.

Sloane maintained that "we don't enjoy what we are doing right now," adding "we certainly have a great deal of respect for the community and a great deal of respect for the abutters."

Throughout the lengthy, well attended proceedings, eleven exhibits were introduced by Hier. These included a copy of the permit application, an aerial photo of the site dated 1981, a purchase and sales agreement, and a site plan. Several of the exhibits were met with specific objections by Altman, who later told the Town Crier "we're going to win this on the law or we're not going to win it on the law."

The next hearing date has been set for Thursday, February 11 at 10 a.m. At that time, those present are expected to walk the site.

Gillis will not seek relection

by Arlene Surprenant

Dan Gillis, a long time member of the Wilmington Housing Authority, announced last week he will not seek re-election in April's town election. He added he also plans to step down as a member of the Affordable Housing Task Force.

A number of factors contributed to the sudden decision, said Gillis. He told the Town Crier it was time to let others take over the struggle to find housing for low to moderate income families, first time homebuyers, and the elderly. Gillis also expressed "disgust" with the lack of foresight of some officials who he claims are delaying projects which might immediately resolve part of Wilmington's affordable housing problems. One such project which Gillis brought to the attention of both of his boards was the 75 duplexes proposed for the border of Woburn and Wilmington on town owned land.

Gillis said, too, he is upset with the direction in which the town is now moving and with developers who end up "destroying" older homes like the Webber place to make way for new construction. He said he was also concerned with the fate of the condominium projects proposed under Chapter 774. Gillis has long been outspoken against increasing density when neighbors are against the proposals and they place a drain on town resources. He has always been a strong supporter of good zoning, which he said is "the most precious thing this town has."

To date, the only person who has taken out papers for Gillis' seat on the housing authority is Hopkins Street resident Lester Chisholm.

School budget talks continue

The Wilmington School Committee is currently in the process of working out its budget for fiscal '88-'89. Members are following the same formula as last year in having all principals, directors, and department heads pay a visit to the committee to spell out their needs for the following year.This is viewed as one of the fairest ways to allot the funds.

The committee has already held three or four meetings on the budget and expects to meet with the Wilmington Finance Committee in

BUNIONS WHAT CAN BE DONE?

A bunion is a painful aggravating bump along the inside of the big toe joint and is usually associated with a crooked toe. The problem is "structural" in nature and can be corrected. Some recent technology and many years of research by Foot-Specialists-Podiatrists, have given us procedures and methods that result in excellent relief and long term correction.

Corrective procedures range from simple removal of the bump and realignment of the big toe, to more sophisticated procedures involving the realignment of bony structures. These procedures aim for long term correction, minimal post-operative discomfort and early recovery.

These procedures are done under local anesthesia on an out-patient basis in either the office or hospital.

If you have any questions about a bunion problem that you might have, please feel free to call and talk with one of our doctors. We look foward to serving you.

Consultant's report calls for housing diversity

by Arlene Surprenant

A need for diversity in Wilmington's housing stock seemed to be one of the key findings of the town's housing consultants as they reported back to the Affordable Housing Task Force last Thursday.

After touring the town, Robert Gatineau of Connery Associates and Rolf Goetze and Lynn Leab of Community Opportunities Group Inc. came up with an overview of the town's composition and its needs. They felt that in many instances, the town's zoning bylaws and other regulations "unreasonably" restrict the expansion of housing and "unreasonably" adds to residential development costs.

Though, at times, discussion was heated, especially on the zoning issue, task force members for the most part listened attentively to the consultants' conclusions.

Goetze referred to Wilmington as a "uniquely" single family town which is "choking" on traffic and running out of buildable land. It was concluded that there has been "a conscious effort" in the past to restrict the type and number of homes in town and that zoning such as R60 has "eaten up" alot of town land.

Some members vehemently disagreed with the last conclusion, saying many homes fall under R20 zoning and there are grandfathered lots which are smaller. Former selectman Rocco DePasquale pointed out that many residents favor a "rural, quiet community" and less dense developments throughout town.

Another conclusion concerned Wilmington's needs. The consultants said those needs are changing as homeowners move into the over 50's age bracket and family size decreases. Goetze said they didn't see much evidence of where older residents fit in town. He said as children move away, homes have more room and this fact might fit into affordable housing plans. He also pointed out that step-up homes for first time homebuyers, like condominiums, are "conspicuously" missing in Wilmington.

Leab added that the character of a community is not only derived from homes but the people who live in them. She said Wilmington may lose the character it really wants if it doesn't intervene and keep families with children in town. In the months ahead, the consultants said they plan to focus on ways to bring more diversity to the town's housing stock.

"I think your assessment of the town's housing stock is right on. There is no diversity-none," agreed task force chairman Jim Stewart.

DePasquale explained that Wilmington has a tax base divided between the residential sector and industry and the resources drawn from the town are alot different than from other communities. He added when a block of voters tried to limit further residential growth at town meeting and succeeded, this led to the present problem with the comprehensive permit process.

Goetze said the solution lies in reviewing housing options that have worked in other towns. He said by doing its own planning, the town won't be forced to accept something that won't work for Wilmington.

Gatineau made several observations. He said many new homes in Wilmington seem to be "almost palaces" compared to existing homes and most subdivision roads are wider than standard and appear to be "airport runways." He said communities which have met with success with condominiums have put them in areas that don't affect residential neighborhoods.

When Gatineau claimed that Wilmington was restricting residential growth beyond what is being done in six neighboring towns through zoning, subdivision regulations, and limiting certain types of housing, some members took strong exception to his comments and tried to correct his impressions.

At their next meeting, task force members will discuss several housing options which could be adopted in Wilmington. These are outlined in a report on affordable housing techniques.

Industrial road planned behind Tew-Mac airport

by Bill Conlon

A proposed industrial road was brought before the Tewksbury Planning Board for discussion last week, and a few eyebrows were raised when the ramifications of the road were understood.

The proposed road will start at the intersection of East and Maple Streets, near Strongwater Brook, and run for roughly one half mile to a parcel owned by the Hupper family, owners of Tew-Mac Airport. The road would follow an abandoned railroad bed now on the site.

Earl Hupper went before the town's planning board to outline the proposal for the road and for a future development.

The road is planned to end at a 35-acre tract of land, owned by Hupper, and located behind Tew-Mac Airport. The road, Hupper said, would give him 400 feet of frontage for building purposes, but would have no effect on the 80 acres now taken up by the airport.

At the end of the planned road is a 12.7 acre parcel of heavy industrial land owned by Maurice McCarthy, according to the assessor's maps. Beyond the McCarthy land is the Indian Ridge condo development, but the road is only planned as far as the Hupper property. The road will pass within 200 feet of the Martha Avenue cul-de-sac.

"Obviously, the board's concern is 'What are we opening up here?'" asked Planning Director Charles Frederiksen.

Hupper told the board that he currently intends to put just a single building on the parcel, most likely a contractor's building and supply business. Hupper agreed that future development could be proposed for the 35-acre parcel, but he said he has no firm plans for the property.

According to Hupper, the land for the roadbed is owned by the McCarthy Realty Trust, and that a deal has been struck for ownership in exchange for building the road. Hupper said the land would not be given over unless he was willing to construct the road.

Hupper told the board that the a sewer line is available to service the property, and that wells can supply any water needed.

"I can have a well in there in a week," he said. "I have excellent water in there."

At the moment, the planned road is now a dirt road running through the cornfields off Maple Street, on the south side of Strongwater Brook.

The planning board review was only a casual discussion, however, and additional plans will be needed in the future if the road proposal goes ahead.

MBTA construction halted

Representative James R. Miceli (D-Tewksbury/Wilmington) has recently been assured by Massachusetts Bay Transportation Authority General Manager James F. O'Leary that the proposed MBTA maintenance facility at Salem Street in Wilmington will not be constructed.

Through meetings with General Manager O'Leary, Representative Miceli was able to secure a commitment that the Salem Street location for the use of a maintenance of way facility would not be used.

Planners, town engineer review subdivision rules

by Arlene Surprenant

The Wilmington Planning Board reviewed ways members had tightened up certain practices with new Town Engineer Harold Gillam, who paid a visit to the board Tuesday night. On hand, also, was new board member John Garrette.

Chairman Carole Hamilton explained there had been some problem with developers coming in mid-review to take back submitted plans in order to make adjustments or revisions. This practice, she maintained, made it difficult for the coordinator to keep track of plans and caused members to review plans over and over again. The practice, she added, has for the most part stopped. Gillam said instead of letting developers take back plans, they should be required to submit a sheet showing any revisions. These revisions could then be noted on the original plan.

Hamilton said the board had also tightened up the bonding process a developer has to go through and members have put the onus on developers to estimate costs and submit them to the board.

Members agreed with Gillam when he said that, from now on, if a subdivision plan is submitted with missing information, he will be "tempted to send it back" to the developer. Hamilton said she herself would prefer this appraoch.

In other business, the board unanimously approved the Mill Road Estates definitive subdivision with conditions, even though members denied several waiver requests and said they were unsure if computations had been reviewed by Fay, Spofford, and Thorndike or if revisions were made to the plan. They also had no decision on the plan from the Wilmington Board of Health.

Members also reviewed the site plans for the Treetops Nursing Home proposed for West Street and for an office space and parking area off Andover Street.

JUNIOR'S TAX RETURN

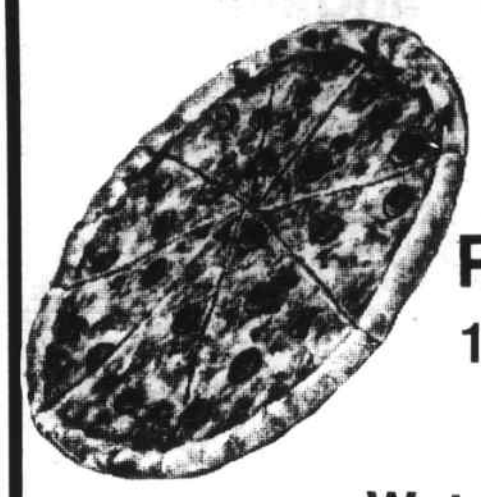

More youngsters will be filing tax returns this year -- and paying more taxes. Filing is mandatory if investment income is more than $500, or total income is more than $2,540. And a youngster can no longer claim a personal exemption if he or she can be claimed as a dependent on someone else's return.

Junior's standard deduction is limited to $500 or the amount of earned income up to $2,540, whichever is more. It gets sticky if Junior works AND has investment income: there's a deduction against earned income only, and nothing against investment income.

Investment income over $1,000 for children under 14 will be taxes at the parent's higher rate. There's another form (Form 8615) to fill out for that. Parents will have to add the youngster's income to their own taxable income, compute the total tax, subtract their own tax, and THEN compute the youngster's tax on earned income plus and tax due on unearned income under $1,000.

Confused? When you want a guide through the thicket of tax regulations, see Presidential candidate Bob Dole displayed a warm sense of humor at a rally in his honor Sunday evening in Winchester.

Frankly speaking

by Kevin John Sowyrda

Bob Dole wants to be President of the United States. And if it weren't for the fact that a sitting vice-president wanted the same job at the same time, Dole would already have the nomination in his hands, on the merits of his simple, mid-western humor alone.

At a gathering in Winchester on Sunday evening, Dole spent more time chatting about his wife Elizabeth than his chief rival for the republican nomination, Vice-President George Bush. And when you come right down to it, Dole was at his best on Sunday with his one liners. That's where his strength is, because through his humor he proves he's the most human of the Republican bunch.

When he met this writer, Dole immediately gave the impression that he had just finished another long day on the New England campaign trail. His hand shake was firm, but he looked as if he needed a three day weekend at Club-Med. And right about now, all the candidates are beginning to look that way. In fact, the stamina it takes to run a national campaign these days, is a litmus test for what a presidential aspirant is really made of.

"The American people are looking for someone that works hard and tells the truth", said Dole, and "if you're looking for someone who's made a difference and been on the firing line, I'm your man".

Dole's been on the firing line quite literally. Having been seriously wounded in combat during World War II, Dole spent numerous months in rehabilitation, and still has difficulty in the simple task of buttoning his dress shirt each day. But his spirit wasn't permanently damaged. At the Jenks Senior Center in Winchester, Dole told a largely elderly group Sunday night that, "I never thought much about disabled people. You never think about those things until it happens to you".

As to the issues of the '88 Campaign, the Senate Minority Leader echoed the Reagan Agenda of lowering the deficit through means other than raising taxes. "I don't get too many letters asking me to raise taxes", said Dole, "and if I did, I'd refer the writers to a psychiatrist."

And proving he's more of a conservative than his republican rivals want to admit, Dole touched upon incentive pay for public school teachers, privatization of public housing, a freeze on federal spending, creating line-item veto power for the president, and moral leadership as the key to the war against drugs.

But Dole was at his best when he got back to his humorous instincts. This is where Elizabeth Dole came into the picture. Secretary of Transportation until she resigned to join her husband's campaign effort, Elizabeth Dole is probably as well known as Bob Dole himself. But that hasn't dented the senator's ego. "I know many people came to see her tonight, and she may even get me elected", quipped candidate Dole.

The crowd felt most comfortable with the senator when he tried this kind of dry wit on them, and he seemed to make even more friends when he punned that his wife "speaks southern fluently". "You can't blame her if you lose your luggage anymore, either", Dole added, to the satisfaction of about three hundred people, who responded to Dole as if he were the sort you could sit down with over a cup of coffee.

That's the type of campaigning 1988 has demanded. Coffee hours and rallies are becoming the trade mark of candidates from Iowa to Massachusetts. And Bob Dole shines brightest when he makes 'em laugh, and laugh hard.

Home water treatment: the good and the bad

by George Allan, chairman
Wilmington Water &Sewer Commissioners

Not long ago, I received a telephone call from a gentleman who was so concerned about my health that he offered to test my tap water for free. Unaccustomed to such benevolence over the telephone, I was thirsting for more information. He informed me that there were contaminants in my drinking water.

Having a more than casual interest in the town's water quality, I quizzed him further. To my surprise, I learned that the water in Wilmington and surrounding towns was "contaminated" by sodium and iron. When he was told that sodium and iron are not considered contaminants, he dropped the bombshell - "There is other junk in the water." I could see that he was now trying to confuse me with technical jargon! Undaunted, I continued on. Additional probing indicated that he was interested in selling me a home filter to remove all the "junk" from the water. When he became frustrated by further questioning, he issued an ultimatum - was I interested in a filter - yes or no? When I tried to ask another question, all I got as a dial tone.

Maybe he wasn't really that interested in my health after all.

This is a classic example of the unscrupulous behavior used by some firms to sell home water filters. Similar techniques are used on television. For example, one advertisement shows a mother filling her son's water glass with a gasoline pump nozzle. The obvious implication being that the water is contaminated.

These selling techniques prey upon the fears and anxieties of homeowners. As a result, several states including New York and California, have adopted legislation regulating firms that sell home filters. Perhaps similar regulations are needed in Massachusetts to control these charlatans.

Not all companies resort to such tactics. There are reputable firms that sell quality products by knowledgeable sales people. They recommend the appropriate filter to correct a particular problem.

From the public health perspective, the most effective way to protect the greatest number of people is via a central municipal treatment system. They are appropriate, however, for private wells if there is a question about quality.

Home treatment systems can be located to treat all the water entering a house or located at the kitchen sink to treat just the drinking water. There are several common types - carbon filters, ion exchangers (water softeners), reverse osmosis and distillation. You can spend $25 or $2,500.

Some homeowners who are on a municipal system may want to use a home filter for aesthetic reasons. Unfortunately, they ignore the filter once it is installed and do not undertake regular maintenance. They wait until the flow is reduced due to plugging before changing or cleaning the filter system. A filter may lose some of its capacity to remove chemicals long before it becomes plugged. In addition, filters that remain inactive for a period of time can become a breeding ground for bacteria.

Like most things, home water treatment systems have advantages and disadvantages. The risks as well as the benefits must be recognized. They are not the panacea for water that some salesmen would like us to believe.

letter to the editor

Dear Larz:

Information is available at all Wilmington schools for two non-residential summer programs for bright and academically talented youngsters. Over the years some Wilmington children have attended College Academy (grades four through eight) at Regis College in Weston each summer from this area. Others have attended College Gate (grades k through three) at Vinson-Owen School in Winchester. Both programs provide unique enrichment programs for bright children who enjoy an academic challenge. Both are based on the philosophy that learning is fun.

To provide optimum learning experiences, no class has more than 10 students. Most of the courses are multi-disciplinary and are not offered in traditional elementary schools. College Academy is at Regis College this summer from July 11 through July 29. Each student selects four 75 minute courses out of the 28 being offered at College Academy. City Desk, Math Madness, World Traveller, Actors' Workshop, and Rocketry are five of this year's favorite courses.

The College Gate program is a half-day one from July 11 to July 29 at the Vinson-Owen School. Each student there selects three 55 minute classes out of the over 24 being offered. Chemistry, computers, banging nails, clowning and math marvels are five of the popular College Gate courses.

Since their inception in 1979 and 1982 respectively, both programs have received the endorsement of educators, administrators, parents, and bright students. Students may request brochures for both programs in each of the Wilmington school offices. For additional information, call the College Academy/College Gate office at 828-9283.

The January 24, 1963 edition of the Town Crier of Wilmington noted that:

The warrant for the Annual Town Meeting included 14 articles, among them the acceptance of Drury Lane, Loumac Road and part of School Street on Pine Hill.

Sheldon T. Gardner, son of Mr. and Mrs. Philip Gardner of Main Street was awarded a degree of doctor of philosophy from the University of SC graduate school.

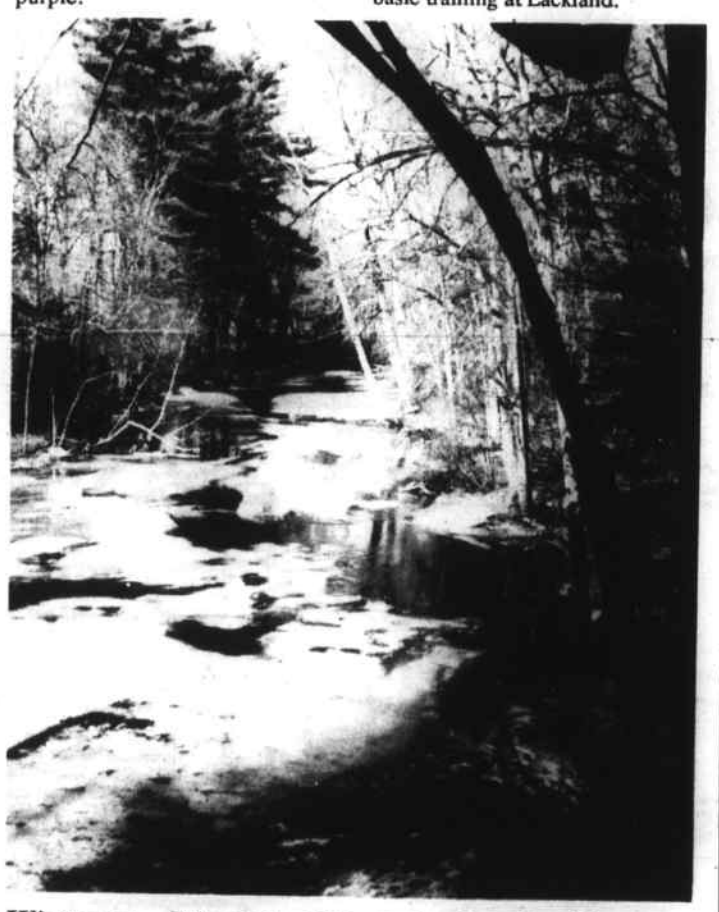

Joseph R. Lynch, candidate for selectman withdrew from the race. Walter Lawler of Swain Road who also took out papers for selectmen, withdrew on Monday.

New curtains were installed in the office of the superintendent of s chools including the waiting and secretarial rooms - a tasteful design, the color could be described as sky blue pink with a touch of purple.

James P. Curtin, Jr. airman apprentice of Glen Road and George Blaisdell of Allston Road spent Christmas in Naples with the attack aircraft carrier USS Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Pictured were officers of the Golden Age Club who were installed at the North Intermediate School with more than 100 spectators present. The Golden Age Club of Lowell provided a Gay Nineties entertainment. Those installed were Tom McQuaide, treasurer; Alida Brabant, president; Helen Hutchins, vice president; Ruth Page, secretary; Angus MacFeeley corresponding secretary.

Airman Rick DeLucia of Cochrane Road was assigned to Sheppard Air Force Base, Texas. The 1960 WHS gradaute completed basic training at Lackland.

Winter on Shawsheen This winter scene on the Shawsheen River was photographed by Harold Costello. The photo won an honorable mention in a New York photography show.

The Humble Farmer

The media is the message

When I asked my psychologist friend Addler if I could bring an unexpected houseguest over to his place for Christmas dinner, he answered as I expected: "Sure, no problem. We'll simply pull another couch up to the table."

A true social scientist, he lives right on the cutting edge of these changing times. No new trend can appear without being quickly magnified into perspective by his California mind.

When I entered his kitchen the day after Christmas, he was filling a cardboard carton with dusty cans of lima beans and packages of American cheese in U.S. Government plain brown wrappers.

"I thought they collected food for the hungry last week," I said as I peeled a banana.

My friend sadly shook his head. "This is for an old buddy who has fallen on hard times - my college roommate."

"He sent you tales of woe at Christmas?"

Addler quietly handed me a card. "No. You'd never know anything was wrong from what he wrote. The media is the message."

I couldn't see anything that even hinted of poverty in the letter on the card and said so.

My friend took off his beanie and unconsciously twiddled the propeller on top as he gave me a pitying look. Then he pushed a huge stack of Christmas cards across the table and said, "Compare that one with these."

I looked through a few and observed, "Obviously all from friends who have, as usual, listed their achievements, awards, trips, through the past year - typical Christmas letters. Kids all on the honor roll at Brown and Yale. Not a hint of divorce or kids on drugs in the whole pile. They're all just like the one from your college chum. Wait! His is handwritten."

Addler nodded sadly. "The media is the message. By writing me in pen he is obviously admitting he can't afford a computer that prints down-home, newsy personal-looking Christmas letters. Even your average computer today that sends the same letter to all can change the name in the heading and type the envelope. Type one letter listing your families' achievments for the year, push a button, and the computer automatically types your entire Christmas letter list."

My eyes opened wide with disbelief. "Christmas messages from friends are now printed out like those personal looking letters I get from The Readers' Digest and Publishers' Clearing House? Where my name is printed all through the letter?"

"Feel the rough edges on this year's Christmas cards," Addler said. "Most people buy Christmas cards on a roll now. The computer prints a little personal message on each one and all you have to do is tear them off, like little individual sheets of toilet paper, and stuff them in the computer addressed envelopes."

"How did they ever think of such a clever way of getting around the Christmas letter chore?"

"A school teacher was the first on record to do it. She got the idea from the computer that prints out the kids' report cards."

I said, "I've seen them. There are a dozen or so comments the teacher can choose from - 'He is not trying' - 'She is not doing her homework.' Push the button and the comment is printed on the reprot card."

"The one I see most often is, 'He is a delight to have in class' - which kind of worries me. It's obviously not the same kid I have at home."

League of Women Voters looks at Wilmington Redevelopment Authority

This is the third in a series of articles presented by the Wilmington League of Women Voters in an effort to familiarize the public with the function and responsibilities of our town officials.

The culmination of this effort will be a public "Meet Your Town Officials" reception to be held in the spring. This reception will give citizens the opportunity to discuss issues of interest or concern with town officials in an informal setting.

The Wilmington Redevelopment Authority (WRA), is an agency created by Chapter 121B of the Massachusetts Statutes which is known as the Housing Authority and Redevelopment Authority enabling legislation.

The WRA Board is comprised of five members, four of whom are elected to five year terms on a rotating basis. The fifth member is appointed by the Commonwealth of Massachusetts. The members of the WRA are not paid for their service and generally are not prohibited from holding other elective or appointive positions.

The primary function of the authority at present includes the continued monitoring of the Jewel Park Renewal Project and as delineated by the Town Meeting of 1985 - "Also, for the purpose of the clearance of the substandard, decadent or open blighted areas: engaging in land assembly and redevelopment of an urban renewal project" or projects with regard to the area commonly referred to as the "38-129 corridor."

While meeting times may change to accommodate changing conditions, the WRA generally meets on the second Thursday of each month in the Chamber of Commerce office at 11 Middlesex Ave. Issues are decided by vote of the Authority members at public meetings which have been properly advertised as such and at which a quorum is present. Certain special votes by the WRA relating to Urban Renewal Plan or project approval and other such matters must be preceded by a public hearing as required by statute.

EXCELLENCE IS THE ESSENCE OF OUR PROGRESS

First Bank 1987 Progress Report

First Bankers reflect back on 1987 with great pride, for not only did we experience continuing financial prosperity but we also expanded our commitment and service to our customers and community.

As of December 31, 1987 assets totaled $404 million, an increase of 27% over a year ago. What is amazing is that in December 1986, our assets surpassed $300 million and now, only twelve months later, assets have soared past $400 million. Our loan portfolio totaled $324 million, an increase of 33% over a year ago and our deposits totaled $366 million, an increase of 27% over a year ago. Even more remarkable is the bank's average annual growth over the past five years during which assets, loans and deposits have grown at annual compounded rates of 27%, 46%, and 31% respectively. This growth places us among the fastest growing banks in both Massachusetts and the country.

We are extremely proud of this growth which was accomplished without sacrificing either the quality of our earnings or assets. Our return on assets (ROA) for 1987 was 1.26% and our return on equity (ROE) was 21.14%. Over the past five years our ROA and ROE have averaged 1.26% and 21.38% respectively. It is estimated for 1987 that the return on assets and return on equity for the entire banking industry will be .30% and 4.2% respectively. The quality of our assets is also superior, as, year after year, our loan charge-offs and delinquencies are among the lowest in the industry. In 1987 we actually had more loan recoveries than loan charge-offs and at year's end our non-performing loans totaled less than ten/one-hundredths of one percent of total loans. These earnings and loan figures again place us among the top banks in the country.

Our figures are the result of our customers' confidence and support, our ability to offer superior products and services, and the combination of dedicated and talented community bankers and a strong and expanding local economy. To further illustrate our financial success we are pleased to report that Sheshunoff Rating Services, a premier bank consulting and analyst organization, recently graded all of the country's FDIC-Insured commercial banks based on historical bank performance, capital adequacy, asset quality, earnings and liquidity. First Bank received an "A" rating!

In 1987, First Bank continued to develop services and products designed to meet our customers' needs based on their requests and findings from ongoing marketing research efforts. These new products include: INVEST—Full service money management service, EQUITY ONE—A home equity line of credit that compliments our already existing Key-Line, CONVERTIBLE MORTGAGES—A mortgage that may be changed from an adjustable rate to a fixed rate, ESCALATOR CD—A Certificate of Deposit that offers short-term flexibility and liquidity combined with guaranteed long-term rates, VISA—Our newest credit card, AFFINITY CARD—A personalized credit card for University of Lowell Alumni, and YANKEE 24/CIRRUS—The largest ATM organization in the world, with 17,000 automated teller machines.

In 1987, we continued our plans to expand the accessibility and convenience of our full-service banking facilities. Our eleventh and largest branch office opened in January at 600 Clark Road on the Tewksbury/Lowell line (intersection of Routes 495 and 38). This office includes the latest in full service branch banking. The branch is on the first floor of a 37,000 square-foot, four-story building that also includes First Bank's Operations Center and Mortgage Center. In October, we relocated our branch in the Oakdale Mall to a new site down the street at 1866 Main Street in Tewksbury. This location gives us the expanded capabilities of two drive-up windows, an automated teller machine for 24-hour banking and private conference rooms. In November, work began on our new Dracut branch on a site adjacent to our current branch on Lakeview Avenue. To be completed in 1988, this new office will be two stories and will include drive-up windows, an ATM, and an expanded lobby area.

In May, we expanded our Board of Directors to eleven members with the addition of Kathleen (Kay) Bradley and Nancy Donahue. Kay is well-known for her many business successes during the past thirty years and is currently Chairperson of the Board of The Chambers of Commerce and Industry-Northern Middlesex. Nancy is associated with the Merrimack Valley United Fund, is co-founder of the Merrimack Repertory Theatre, serves on the Board of Directors of First Foundation and was the first Executive Director of the University of Lowell Foundation.

We continued our devotion to a long list of civic and charitable activities. One such activity was First Foundation, which is funded by First Bank. The Foundation provides financial support to local artistic, charitable, civic, cultural, educational and social endeavors. First Foundation is an outstanding example of how a private/public partnership can function and provide far-reaching benefits to an entire community. Members of the Foundation's Board of Directors, their subcommittees and the Advisory Board are from the community at large and have unselfishly volunteered their time in 1987 to make the Foundation a success.

Our deep involvement in the revitalization of Lowell was recognized in 1987. In February, I, George Duncan, was invited by Prince Charles to visit London and Halifax along with three other officials who represented the Commonwealth of Massachusetts and business community of Lowell. All were invited because of their past participation in the rebirth of Lowell. England plans to conduct similar revitalization projects in its industrial cities using Lowell as its model. In addition, we were pleased to share with the Coalition for a Better Acre in the success of the Acre's Triangle Project in Lowell. We hope the success of this affordable housing program will serve as an example and encourage future endeavors of this kind throughout the area. Other community activities included a number of public seminars featuring such subjects as taxes and financial planning, money management for young couples, nonprofit issues, small business issues and letters of credit.

In summary, 1987 has been a year that we do reflect back on with pride for we have so many reasons to be thankful. Most importantly, we are thankful to our customers. We have developed many lasting friendships over the years and started many new ones this year. Customers are more than people who bank with us ... customers are a part of our First Bank family—they make it all happen.

Six to test for police chief

There will be six officers taking a promotional exam for the position of Tewksbury Chief of Police, according to civil service.

Christine Kent, director of local government services for the state civil service system, said six police lieutenants have asked to take the chief's exam on February 6. Kent also said an exam for deputy chief will be given on the same day, but the filing deadline for the deputy chief's exam is this Friday, January 22, at the close of business.

A new police chief will be needed as of April 2, the date when Police Chief John Sullivan turns in his badge. Sullivan, a 36-year veteran of the Tewksbury force, announced his retirement intentions to the board of selectmen last week.

According to Director Kent, the chief's exam process works as follows:

The promotional exam for chief was opened only to permanent police lieutenants who have been certified for one year or more. The filing deadline was Jan. 8, and Kent said six applicants have filed to take the test.

Test scores, she said, will be sent back to the applicants, who then have 17 days to appeal any of the grades. A cutoff score for the test will later be established by the civil service's selection bureau, she said, and a list of the top three candidates, in the order of their test results, will be forwarded to the town for final approval once the vacancy for chief is certified.

Since the vacancy in the Tewksbury police chief position is known in advance, she said, it is not unusual to have an eligibility list made up in advance.

The promotional exams will be held in the Tewksbury Memorial High School library on February 6, from 8:30 a.m. to 3 p.m.

And once the eligibility list comes back from civil service, listing the top three test takers, town manager David Cressman will then have to decide who will become Tewksbury's next chief of police.

Health data book available from state

Massachusetts residents are living longer, divorcing each other less, and having fewer babies than people in other states.

That information, and more, is available in a new booklet published by the Massachusetts Public Health Department's Health Statistics and Research Division. The report reveals how the Commonwealth stands in leading causes of death, population trends and many other categories over a 45-year period.

"As the old year passes and a new one begins, it is appropriate to look at the landmarks in our lives. And that's exactly what this publication does," said Public Health Commissioner Deborah Prothrow-Stith.

"Collecting data on sickness, death and the vital events in people's lives, has always been an important mission of the Public Health Department. Such information is invaluable in health research. It is equally important that the information be available to the public in an easy-to-read form."

The 16-page publication, titled "Selected Demographic and Health Characteristics," covers the time period from 1940 to 1985. An overview of a variety of statistics, it is presented in a graphic form that is quickly read and easy to grasp.

According to Daniel J. Friedman, Director of Health Statistics and Research Division, the statistics have always been available to anyone who wanted or needed them.

"What is new about this booklet," said Friedman, "is the format."

"For the first time we've presented the information in a way that is helpful for people who don't work with raw statistics on a day-to-day basis," said Friedman.

"It's the kind of booklet we hope will be useful for people who need to see a trend quickly and easily, such as city or town health officers, city planners or other policymakers," he said.

A glance at one graph in the book shows that a baby born in Massachusetts in 1980 can expect to live to be 75 years old. Another graph reveals that the six leading causes of death nationally - heart disease, cancer, stroke, accidents, pneumonia/influenza, and chronic obstructive pulmonary disease - were the same in Massachusetts as other states. Other areas of informatioan include: population distribution by age, numbers of births to unmarried parents, age-specific birth rates, marriage and divorce rates, and numbers of suicides.

The booklet is available at no charge by calling the Division of Health Statistics and Research at DPW, 727-2977, or the DPH Public Information Office, 727-0049.

Access an issue for subdivision

by Arlene Surprenant

Proponents of the Whitefield Elm Village subdivision proposed for Andover Street came before the Wilmington Planning Board Tuesday night to discuss the access road to the property and other issues which had been raised by the town's consulting engineers.

Fay, Spofford, and Thorndike said they prefer to change the entrance to allow for a 200 foot site distance when cars travel along Andover Street at 30 mph. Other alternatives presented for the board's consideration included either a 150 foot site distance at the entrance or a 125 foot site distance. After some discussion, board members asked proponents to provide at least a 150 foot site distance.

Developer Dan Fonzi of Danco Development Corp. suggested, in the interests of safety, to raise both the entrance and a portion of Andover Street five feet and widen a part of Andover Street as well to 24 feet. He said this would increase site distance, reduce the grade, and make it easier to get out and flow with the traffic. It would also mean a meeting with the Town Engineer and DPW Supt. Bob Palmer to go over the plan and a possible meeting with Reading Light since that company's power easement is on the property.

"It makes sense; it's good planning. We can really make this a nice entrance," Fonzi maintained.

Another concern of Fay, Spofford, and Thorndike was raised. This was the angle off Andover Street as cars enter the project. The engineers had suggested proponents alter the entrance island slightly so it appears there's a 60 degree angle. The board went along with FST's recommendation.

Danco's engineer, Janet Bernardo of Allen, Demurjian, Major, and Nitsche Inc,asked the board to answer a number of questions she had on the project. These included requests from two abutters for access to Andover Street through the subdivision, and concerns on such things as percolation tests, granite curbs, trees, drainage pipes, power easement requirements, and guard rails. During the discussion proponents said they hope to move quickly along and avoid alot of red tape which could delay the project and possibly allow the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority to take over the site for a sludge facility.

REAL ESTATE GUIDELINE

Kelley & Kompany

NEGOTIATING WITH THE SELLERS

One of the first questions many prospective buyers ask us when they find the perfect house is "will they take less?" The agent can't tell you what the sellers will take, and the only way to test their bottom line is to make an offer. If you can negotiate a lower price or better terms than the original offering, you may possibly save yourself some money, but you could risk losing a home you really love in the process.

If your offer is below the seller' bottom line, they will probably make you a counter offer. If your bid is too low, you run the risk of offending them. Your offer may not be taken seriously -- especially if it is far below market value.

Another risk is that while you and the sellers are trading offers and counter offers, another buyer may come in with a more attractive bid. If this happens before your negotiations are concluded, your sellers may accept the competing offer. Before you decide what kind of offer to make, weigh the benefits and risks of going in with a lower price than what the sellers are asking.

For professional advice on all aspects of buying or selling a home, talk to the professionals at Kelley & Kompany. Come by our office at 11 Middlesex Avenue (Suite #10) or call us at 658-4171.

Dewing to visit LILE

Dewing School fifth graders will get the chance to pick, card, spin, and weave wool, Monday, January 25 at 1 p.m. during "Farm to Factory," a program about the transition from an agrarian to an industrial society presented by Lowell National Historical Park at the Dewing School. Members of the class also dress in 19th century farm clothing during the 90 minute program.

"Farm to Factory" is part of the Lowell Industrial Learning Experience (LILE) a series of three education programs about the industrial revolution offered to area elementary, junior high, and high schools. LILE was designed by the National Park Service and area teachers to supplement the social studies curriculum. Each program focuses on a specific theme and presents an opportunity for group participation and hands-on activities.

The programs are free and are conducted in the classroom or on-site at Lowell National Historical Park. For more information contact the education coordinator, Lowell National Historical Park, 169 Merrimack St., Lowell, Ma 01852; 459-1000.

Busy months at Heathbrook

December and January have been busy months at Tewksbury's Heathbrook School. Santa's Secret Workshop, a mini-store where students bought holiday presents, proved to be a tremendous success. Parents, staff and students enjoyed browsing and choosing that special gift.

As a holiday treat, the PAC distributed super double-fudge sundaes to the students and staff of the school. No calories were counted!

The children of the Heathbrook School participated in the Toys for Tots campaign to distribute new toys to needy children. We were delighted with the response and are proud of the effort made by the parents and children to help those less fortunate.

The new year is shaping up as a busy one. On Martin Luther King's Day, the PAC sponsored a roller skating party at the Roller Kingdom in Tyngsboro. A wonderful time was had by the large turnout of parents and children who skated the morning away to the sounds of today's music.

On Feb. 5, the PAC will sponsor a family night at which time those in attendance will be captivated by the magic of Joe Carota.

The next PAC meeting is Thursday, Jan. 21 at 7:30 p.m. in the school library. All parents are invited to attend.

Rotarians told of Food for the Poor

Food for the Poor, Inc. is not a governmental agency. It is a non profit corporation, interdemoninational, which serves the countries of the third world, and particularly, Haiti.

There is no hope in Haiti, Michael Hickey told the members of the Rotary Club of Wilmington on January 13. One half of the children of Haiti die before they reach the age of five.

Aid, government to government, does not pay. Food for the Poor Inc., a few weeks ago, refused a donation of $250,000 from the U.S. Government. There are too many strings attached to such a donation.

We have established food kitchens and we have established bread lines for the poor in Haiti. We work through missionaries, Protestant and Catholic. We make our appeals to the churches of the United States, and to the Rotary Clubs.

Missionaries of all faiths work with these poor people, and we help. We do our work through them. Ninety-five cents of every dollar we receive goes to direct aid for the needy people of Haiti.

Since February 1982 Food for the Poor has raised nearly $2,000,000 in cash from over 2000 contributors. In addition Food for the Poor has shipped over $25,000,000, market value, worth of food and goods to the poor in the Caribbean, South America and Africa.

Further information may be had from the Food for the Poor office - Box 885 Lynnfield MA 01940. The telephone number is 334-4444.

WHS to adopt seven-period day

by Arlene Surprenant

Wilmington High School students will be following a seven period day instead of the current eight period, five day cycle when they begin school next September. This was the decision reached by a majority of school committeemen at their meeting last Wednesday.

The consensus of the committee and high school administrators was that this was the best approach considering the decline in pupil enrollments and the small teacher-student ratios evident this year.

According to WHS Principal Paul Fleming, who explained he had spent over two years researching the change at the request of the superintendent of schools, there are several advantages to the plan. With a seven period day, he said, approximately seven minutes of instruction time will be added to each class. The plan will also reduce the number of study halls, afford an opportunity to decrease the time teachers spend on administrative tasks, and let students amass 128 credits for graduation.

Not everyone was in favor of the change. Shirley Callan voted against it when she was told it will increase the average student - teacher ratio from one teacher for every 12 students to one teacher for every 18 students.

"I'd rather have smaller classes because most of the students need more time, not less," she said. Callan added she prefers more individualized instruction, especially for students in lower level classes.

Most members, however, agreed with Michael (Doc) Thomas, who felt "the students have everything to gain here."

"Professionally, this is a must," said Bridget Zukas, who said her mind was made up after viewing the ratios of each class at the high school.

It was pointed out that the decline in WHS enrollment from 1300 students to a projected 711 next year will also lead to some teacher terminations at the secondary level. Zukas said she felt the whole issue was best brought up in January to give teachers enough preparation for what lies ahead.

"It's the direct approach; it's the honest approach; it's the only way to go," she said.

Wilmington school news

Wilmington High

Thirteen members of the Model Congress Club traveled to Springfield this week to participate in the American International Model Congress. As in previous years, students who attend the Model Congress participate in a legislative simulation activity. Each participating school prepares a bill for consideration by the delegates.

Students work in committees examining each bill, making amendments, and passing bills on to the House or Senate. They also have a chance to vote on proposed legislation.

This year, the WHS delegation submitted a bill which would revise the tax exemption status for students who work full or part time. The thirteen students were accompanied by Mrs. Hayes and Mrs. Bowser, faculty advisors.

Girl Scout annual cookie sale

Hundreds of Girl Scouts will begin knocking on doors Friday, January 22 through February 7, accepting orders for Girl Scout cookies.

A new variety, the "Echo" cookie will be introduced this year. It is a chocolate sandwich cookie with a vanilla cream center. The other varieties include the popular thin mint Girl Scout cookie; the caramel Samoas; old-fashioned chocolate chunks; chocolate and peanut butter Tagalongs; oatmeal and peanut butter Do-Si-Dos; and the shortbread Trefoils.

The Girl Scout cookie sale is important to neighborhood troops for many reasons. The sale enables troops to fund camping trips, community service projects, and numerous activities. The sale also presents an opportunity for girls to learn poise, self-confidence, and how to set and achieve goals. The sale not only finances the Girl Scout program, it is a Girl Scout program.

Girls are trained to greet customers courteously, understand why she is selling cookies, and the importance of following through on a commitment to deliver the cookies promptly.

All packages are $2 and cookie delivery will begin the week of March 7.

Spar and Spindle Girl Scout Council serves close to 10,000 girls in 53 communities and is supported by United Ways and Funds.

All-America selection

Jeff Murphy, Wilmington High School senior, second from left, was recently honored as a nominee selection to the 1987-88 McDonald's High School All-American Band, as he was presented with a plaque by the McDonald's management staff at their Reading Store. Pictured at the award presentation are, from left to right: Barbara Mette, WHS music director; Jeff; Joseph Murphy (father); Phil Sciabarasi, store manager; Catherine Murphy, (mother); and Gary Saucier, area manager.

Wilmington senior topics

Dr. Leavitt, Friday

Podiatrist Dr. Leavitt will be at the Center Friday, Jan. 22 at 9 a.m. He will remain until he has treated all the seniors waiting to see him. Please pick up a ticket from Louise as you enter the center.

Nurse, Thursday

Abbie will be at the Center Thursday, Jan. 21 starting at 1:30 p.m. She will be checking blood pressures and giving diabetes test. Remember if you have not been checked for diabetes or if it has been a long time since you have had your last test, it would be wise to have your sugar level tested this week. Diabetes is a disease we can have active in our systems and not be aware of. By having it detected in its early stage it can be controlled. If it is not it could lead to a very serious health condition.

Risk assessment

Abbie also gives a risk assessment test in her office at the Town Hall on appointment only. Several tests are involved in the complete assessment group of controllable illnesses. One test is for cholesterol, another health danger giving us no warning that it is getting out of control in our systems. An elevated blood cholesterol is a risk factor for contracting cornorary heart disease. To check the amount of cholesterol in your blood is very easily done through the test given by Abbie. It will cost $3, it will make you aware if you have a high cholesterol level allowing you to take proper steps to decrease it with proper diet and exercise.

If you are a lucky senior citizen you will be told that the level of your cholesterol will not clog your arteries. Preventive medicine is the only way we can prolong our lives that is knowing what our health problem is and we are controlling it. If interested in the test call Abbie at the Town Hall.

Crafts instructor needed

We are still looking for a person or persons who can teach our arts and crafts classes at the center on a day of their choice. It is held in our beautiful well-equipped crafts room. We have many seniors who want to learn crafts of all types. All we need is a teacher or teachers. If you have a craft you have mastered would you be willing to teach it to other seniors?

Whist party Monday

The second whist party of January will be held Monday, Jan. 25 in the function room starting at 1 p.m. Gift certificate prizes for the whist are donated to the seniors by the Kiwanis and Rotary clubs. Other prizes are donated by the seniors themselves.

Food stamps are available through the Welfare Office in Woburn for those seniors who qualify. If you qualify for SSI you may also qualify for food stamps. The amount of income you can have and still get food stamps depends on the number of people in your household. Your gross household monthly income before deductions is: a household of one, $569 a month; a household of two, $764 a month and a household of three, $959. Certain assets are also added to your income. If you feel you may qualify it will be to your advantage to check with the Welfare Office.

Census forms due back

Town Clerk Pat Ward sent all households census forms last week. It is very important that all of us correct if necessary any errors on the forms, sign them and return to Pat as soon as possible. To be registered as a resident of the town is important in receiving money from the government that helps to meet the expenses of the town. It is also important to us as senior citizens. How much we receive from the State of Massachusetts through the formula grant depends on the number of residents 60 or older sending in their census forms. Hurry and send yours back. Thank you.

Financial aid night

More than 75 people attended the financial aid night at Wilmington High School January 12.

Michael Moresco, the financial aid coordinator, organized the workshop and updated the WHS financial aid booklet which was distributed to all those in attendance. The booklet provided students and parents with the much needed financial aid form, bank/loan information, local scholarship information, sources of information, and other pertinent facts and figures.

Richard Pastor, financial aid advisor at Northern Essex Community College, presented a financial aid overview and reviewed the financial aid form. Edward Woods, vice principal of WHS, discussed the local scholarship application procedures and the selection process.

A follow up meeting is being conducted January 20 and will provide parents with the opportunity to complete the FAF under the direction of Anthony DeLuca, former town employee. Parents are encouraged to take a rough draft of their FAF to the meeting.

Additional financial aid booklets are available in the WHS guidance office.

Parents wishing further assistance in completing the FAF are encouraged to call the toll free hotline number 1-800-422-4725.

According to Chairman Tony Accardi, 85 to 90 percent of next year's budgeted monies will most likely go toward teacher salaries. Accardi added that because the committee had agreed to spread expenses for capital outlay over a five year period, he felt this account would be down.

Jeanne Ashworth, Wilmington's Olympic speed skater, is shown at the Glen Road School in Wilmington in 1964, talking of speed skating to pupils. She toured all the Wilmington schools on that day, talking of physical fitness, and telling of her adventures in two Olympic contests, in Japan and in Sweden.

The clothes on the table had been worn by Jeanne in Austria. There is, over the clothes, a Russian set of roller skates, with four wheels in a line instead of being in the regular American style.

Jeanne is holding a pair of Russian speed skates, a gift to her from the Russian Speed Skating Federation.

Wilmington's only Olympian: Bronze Medalist Jeanne Ashworth

In a few weeks the Olympic Winter Events will be taking place in Calgary, in Canada. There will be many events, and many contestants, from all over the world.

One of the events will be speed skating, both for men and for women. It will be a good bet that, among the spectators will be Jeanne Ashworth, formerly of Wilmington.

Where Jeanne lives now is unknown, but she left Wilmington in the fall of 1963, to live in Lake Placid, N.Y. Lake Placid was the United States capital of speed skating.

Jeanne is still fondly remembered by a few Wilmington residents. She was the only Wilmington resident ever to compete in the Olympics, and the first American woman to win an Olympic medal is speed skating. She held the title of North American Women's Champion for many years, in both indoor and outdoor competition.

Her parents lived at 117 Church St. Jeanne took up skating on her own, learning to skate on a small pond off Lowell Street, a pond which was across the street from her father's candy store. Raymond Ashworth ran an ice cream store where Stelios Restaurant is today. He then built a small store which is now Maple Meadow Gardens.

It was about that time that Carl "Bucky" Backman of Chestnut Street started teaching the neighbors' youngsters how to skate. Jeanne soon became one of Carl's pupils and as the youngsters improved a Wilmington Skating Club was formed. It hired the old South School from the town, and made a skating rink in back which was exactly the same size as the Boston Garden skating rink.

There were probably three or four dozen members of the Wilmington Skating Club, mostly from Wilmington, and every evening, and all day Saturday and Sunday, during the cold weather, the Skating Club rink would be filled with aspiring speedsters. Besides Jeanne, there were Janet Backman, Jeff Williamson, Mike Weinberg, Jr. and his sister Nancy.

The Boston Daily Record sponsored speed skating contests as an annual event, in the Boston Garden. Hundreds of children would be present, from many parts of the state. From Wilmington came hundreds of spectators. There were special trains from Wilmington and one Sunday, on one of those trains, there were over 1100 passengers.

Jeanne was good. There was no denying it. It soon got to the condition where she had to compete with girls who were older than she. By the time she was 14 she could compete only with girls who were 16 or older.

There was a one mile race which the spectators never forgot.

One mile, at the Boston Garden, was 16 laps around the rink. The rule was that if any skater slipped during the first time around, everyone stopped, and there would be a new start.

Somebody, not Jeanne, slipped in that first lap. Jeanne stopped, and then realized that no one else had stopped.

When she started again, she was one lap behind the rest of the contestants. In the next 15 laps for those contestants, Jeanne covered 16 laps. She was just behind the girl who first crossed the line!

If that race had been for one mile and three yards Jeanne would have won. She lived speed skating.

Her mother or her father would take her up to the Shawsheen River in the Andover - Tewksbury area for speed skating in the winter. She would skate for miles, on the smooth ice -- sometimes all night long.

Jeanne was a girl who could not be kept out of the Olympics. She worked at it for some years. It was a tough competition.

The January 2, 1964 Town Crier had a headline, in letters over one inch high - "Jeanne breaks Olympic record."

In trials at Colorado Springs, Colorado, she had broken the women's speed record for 500 meters. She did the distance in 44.4 seconds. She was one half of a second better than was Helga Hasse of East Germany.

Four years previously, Jeanne had come in at third place, in the Olympic Speed Skating for 1960, and had won the bronze medal.

Of course, in that day, the girls she had to defeat were the Russians.

Jeanne was quoted, in a front page story in the New York Times. "I just had to beat a Russian."

There were many Russian women contestants, who crossed the finish line after Jeanne.

'The Shoe' moves to Wilmington

by Arlene Surprenant

When United Shoe Machinery Corporation moved to Wilmington last October, it was quite a change. For one thing, it involved a longer commute for approximately 300 employees, many of whom represent the third or fourth generation with the company. For another, it meant a move from the more familiar environs of their cavernous buildings in the heart of Beverly to a smaller, more efficient facility in the rural surroundings off Ballardvale Street.

To hear President Kevin Cochrane and Advertising Manager Robert Kunkel tell it, United Shoe today is a company that remains true to its past but is steadily moving forward with the help of modern technology and a more streamlined operation.

"We don't want to lose sight of the past but our direction is definitely toward tomorrow," Cochrane said in a recent early morning interview. Cochrane points out that his company, which provides a full variety of machines, supplies, and services necessary in shoe production, among other things, has achieved " a fair degree of stabilization in recent years." It also has a strong customer base and a reputation for quality that dates back to its small beginnings in 1899.

Kunkel refers to USM as "a forerunner of any progressive thing that was ever done" in the industry. Sidney Winslow is credited with founding the company, which was comprised of three smaller firms, each making one kind of machine needed in shoe production.

Those in charge soon established a foreign department and an experimental department. With these visionary moves, USM reportedly became one of the first three international companies ever formed and one of only 10 companies in America with a research department. Inventors in this department provided a continuing wealth of new products and machines.

USM moved into its 93 acre complex in Beverly in 1903 and became known to residents as simply "The Shoe." The Shoe began hiring thousands of laborers, many of them immigrants, to build its mammoth reinforced-concrete buildings. Many of these same people stayed on to work in the sprawling factory buildings.

"It was a thriving business," said Kunkel, adding that at its peak in the 1940's, USM employed 5,000 workers.

"Actually, the company was a way of life," explains Kunkel. It had its own country club which later became the Beverly Golf and Tennis Club. It had its own semi-pro baseball team, which drew employees to Sunday afternoon games. USM, too, had its own yacht club, theater group, hospital, fire department, band, gas station, immigrant school, and company store.

United Shoe was recognized in Fortune magazine as being ahead of its time in employee benefits. For instance, the company had one of the first medical plans in existence and offered numerous recreational benefits as well. The Beverly plant was viewed as a model of what a healthful, efficient factory environment should be.

Much of company life between 1900 and 1926 was preserved in approximately 5,000 to 10,000 glass negatives. The rare negatives offer infinitely detailed pictures of employees; early machines; dances, concerts, and other social activities; and the plant itself, which sits on Beverly's Bass River. The collection also shows a mail carrier on roller skates, further proof of the expanse of the facility.

In an effort to share the company's history with others and to prevent any loss during the move to Wilmington, Kunkel contacted the Boston Museum of Science to see if they were interested in the collection of glass negatives. Though it was deemed too large for that museum, Washington's Smithsonian Institute sent two historians to take not only the negatives but old company journals, payrolls, and accounts as well. These had all been organized and indexed by USM history buff Clark Goodchild, who retired in 1982.

A total of 111 crates in all were sent to the Smithsonian for a future display, says Kunkel. Four other local museums, including the Essex Museum in Salem, also shared in the wealth of historical records.

In 1911, the company began a long history of anti-trust litigation which culminated with the divestiture of part of the company's machinery assets in 1971.

During the early years, USM reportedly paid its employees the highest average wages in the nation and commercialized some 39 new machines. Between 1899 and 1960, USM developed and marketed nearly 800 new and improved shoe machines and patented more than 9,000 inventions in a variety of areas.

The company was eventually bought by the Emhart Corporation in 1976 and sold, a year ago, to United Machinery Group of Leicester, England.

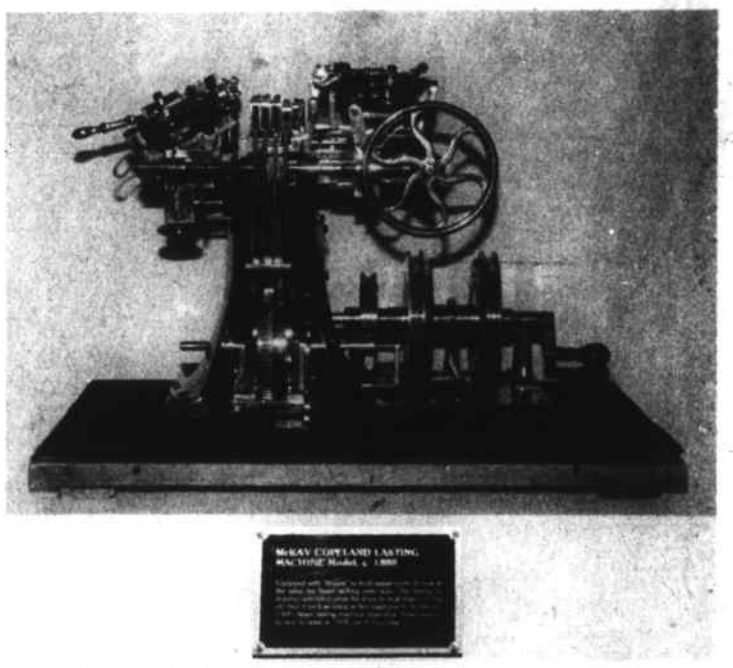

It was obvious that the company had to keep up with new technology. In 1972, the Microprocessor Controlled Stitcher was introduced by United Shoe. This invention helped pioneer the switch from heavy machinery to microprocessing technology. Kunkel explains the new technology makes the work go faster, is more cost effective, and, at the same time, turns out a quality shoe. In the past, for instance, 20 cowboy boots could be turned out a day. With the new stitching machine, an unlimited number of boots can be produced in a day.

Today, using a CAD/CAM system to create programs for United Shoe's Micronic stitchers, a design idea for a shoe can be tried out without the expense of creating sample shoes. Other machines, like the Powder Reinforcing Machine and the Microfolder for folding leather under the shoe's toe, are also part of USM's line.

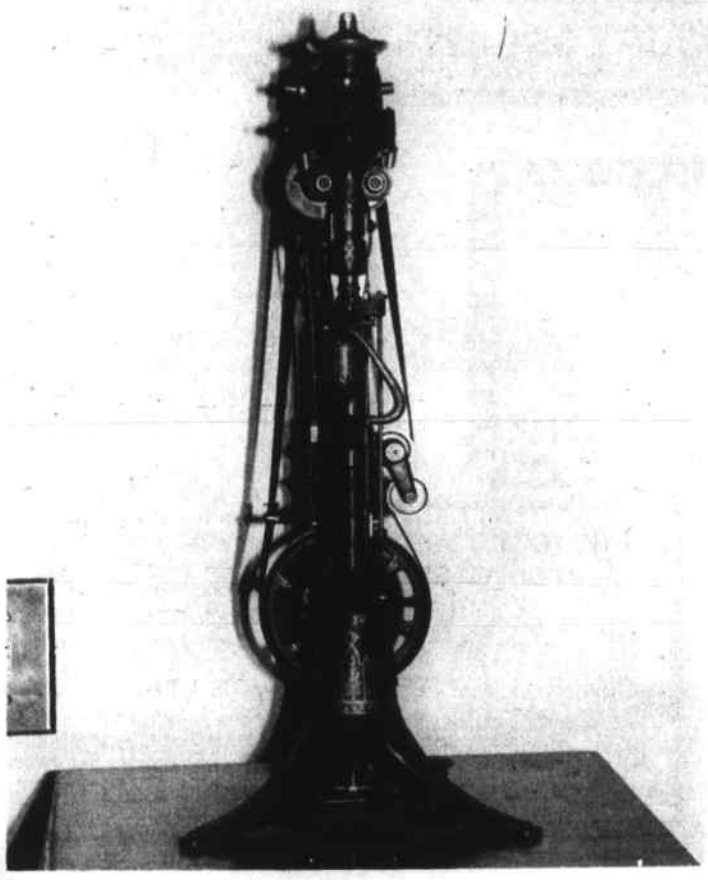

Kunkel explains the company has also branched out into the area of cutting presses. USM makes the machines and sells them to related automotive, foam and leather, and apparel industries to use in cutting out forms and shapes. This area is currently seen as "a strong growth area" for the company.

Clearly, USM has come a long way from the McKay Copeland Lasting Machine and the old fashioned pegging machine which gleam in glass cases in their new home on Research Drive in Wilmington.

Clearly, too, United Shoe Machinery Corp is making giant strides toward the Twenty-First Century thanks, in part, to its historical past, its willingness to move in new directions, its dedicated employees, and the optimism expressed by men such as Robert Kunkel and President Kevin Cochrane.

Lasting machine This model of a McKay Copeland lasting machine is on display in the lobby of the United Shoe Machinery Corp. on Technology Drive in North Wilmington.

Pegging machine This model of an antique wire pegging machine is of the type once produced by the United Shoe Machinery Corp.

First Bank reports growth

First Bank has reported 27 percent growth in assets during 1987. According to their year-end progress report, the bank had passed $404 million in assets as of December 31, 1987.

The report also stated that the bank's loan portfolio totaled $324 million, an increase of 33 percent over a year ago and deposits totaled $366 million, an increase of 27 percent over 1987.

"The bank's average annual compounded growth over the past five years for assets, loans and deposits has been 27 percent, 46 percent and 31 percent respectively," said Bank Chairman of the Board/CEO George Duncan. "This growth places us among the fastest growing banks in both Masschusetts and the country."

First Bank President Richard Main said, "Our figures are the result of our customers' confidence and support, our ability to offer superior products and servcies, and the combination of dedicated and talented community bankers and a strong and expanding local economy."

The bank also reported that its return on assets for 1987 was 1.26 percent and its return on equity was 21.14 percent. "The quality of our assets is also superior as our charge-offs and delinquencies are among the lowest in the industry," said CEO George Duncan. "These earnings and loan figures again place us among the top banks in the country."

Main Street construction — Construction is underway on the Carciofi property on Main Street, across from the Friendly restaurant, where a quick-lube oil-change business is planned. The cement foundation has been poured, and the building itself will be erected in coming months.

First Bank chairman resigns

George L. Duncan, chairman and chief executive officer of First Bank submitted his resignation to the bank's Board of Directors ending a 15 year association with First Bank.

Mr. Duncan was named executive vice president and member of the board of directors of First Bank in January 1973 and was named president in December 1980. In December of 1985 he was named chairman of the board of directors and in December of 1986 the bank's chief executive officer. Since being appointed president and chief executive officer First Bank grew from $98 million in assets to $404 million as of December 31, 1987.

In March of 1986, Mr. Duncan successfully directed the merger of First Bank with the Hartford National Corporation and has since August, 1987, worked closely with the management of the Shawmut National Corporation, the parent of the soon-to-be completed Hartford National Corporation/Shawmut merger.

Involved for over two decades in numerous civic and community activities, Mr. Duncan was founding president of the Lowell Development and Financial Corporation, former treasurer of the Greater Lowell Regional Vocational-Technical School District, former member of the Governor's Judicial Nominating Committee (1976-1978), former commissioner of the Lowell Historic Preservation Commission, present member of the board of trustees at Lowell General Hospital, and founding member of the board of directors of First Foundation, an organization established by Frist Bank to provide financial assistance to local artistic, civic, charitable, educational, and social service endeavors.

At age 47, Duncan intends to explore several challenging business opportunities in banking, private industry or real estate. Duncan lives with his wife, Carol and two children in Lowell.

Inpact of stock crash

Bob O'Connor, Vice President at First Bank, with two branch offices in Tewksbury, stated that during January many Greater Lowell employees will be realizing for the first time that the 1987 stock crash was not just "someone else's problem." That is because they will soon be receiving their 1987 year-end statements for their retirement programs.

"Being a banker, I meet a lot of people who want to talk about their retirement savings," said First Bank Vice President Bob O'Connor. "And what I have found is that more often than not the people who have their money in employer sponsored qualified retirement plans do not realize that their money could be invested in stocks."

On October 19, the day that the stock market crashed, some qualified retirement plans lost as much as 30 percent of their value according to O'Connor, who is in charge of First Bank's IRA program. "IRAs are not subject to loss of value because most IRAs are invested in certificates of deposits, which are FDIC insured and are not related to the stock market at all."

O'Connor continued, "What most people also will soon be finding out is that when the time comes to pay taxes, they cannot write off any losses that they suffered in their stock-invested qualified retirement plans. That is because the money put into the plan has yet to be recorded as part of their taxable income."

Black artists featured

Two local black artists will be featured at an exhibit that will be held in Tewksbury during the end of January in conjunction with Martin Luther King, Jr. Day.

To be held January 19-30 at the First Bank Building at 600 Clark Rd. Tewksbury, the exhibit will include the works of Lowell photographer Bill Hall and Dracut artist Ron Simmons.

Hall's photographs include several familiar scenes in Lowell as well as various studies in people and composition. He is a long-time resident of Lowell who at one point worked under national noted photographer Ansel Adams. Hall's works have been previously exhibited at the Whistler House.

Simmons is a resident of Dracut whose oversized drawings include people in various poses and moods. He works in pencil on color illustration boards. He is a graduate of Massachusetts College of Art and is a designer for the Raytheon Art Department. Simmons' work has been exhibited at the Whistler House and the University of Lowell.

The exhibit is open to the public free of charge during First Bank's regular hours. The First Bank building is located at the intersection of routes 38 and 495. For more information, contact Mary Lonergan at 459-2000.

Wildcats burn Lowell, 78-69

by Rick Cooke
Sports Editor

The Redmen have faced the iron twice and melted into the floorboards both times. The Wildcats have simply wiped their brows and scored their most important victory of the young season.

Such are the respective basketball fortunes of Tewksbury and Wilmington as we head into the real meat of the Merrimack Valley Conference schedule.

Last week coach Bob Melillo's Redmen got a chance to put their 8-0 overall record on the line and fell flat against Lowell (79-60) and Lawrence Central Catholic (76-55).

Against Lowell the Redmen panicked in the face of the 1-3-1 press and were routed early before making a brief comeback.

The Central defeat saw Redmen Rich Prince (20 points) and Carl Melius (12) score in double figures, but they couldn't match the performance of Central's John Daileanes (four three pointers) who lit the nets for 30 points.

A first period back injury to TMHS point guard Kevin O'Brien (11 points) certainly didn't help matters. The Redmen are in trouble without O'Brien around to run the show.

Coach Dave Orndorff's Wildcats provided the week's highlight, however with their 78-69 victory over slumping Lowell (a 75-73 loser to Billerica in Monday action).

The Wildcats went out and shot an unheard-of 81% from the floor Friday night on a series of layups and low post shots by senior center Mike Lombard (28 points, 19 rebounds).

Wilmington also received vital contributions from Jamie Robichaud (13 points, six rebounds), Joe McMenimen (15), Dan Woods (10) and Tom Moran (12), as all five WHS starters were in double figures for the first time this season.

"We were seven for eight from the foul line in the fourth quarter," noted Orndorff. "Robichaud scored six points, Lombard had seven and McMenimen five points to go along with Woods' four assists and two steals in that last quarter."

"With two minutes left in the game both Robichaud and McMenimen fouled out and Jon Oliver and Tony DeSantis came in to do a great job of getting the ball up the floor," praised the WHS coach.

"We had no trouble at all with their presses," noted Orndorff. "We kept going over them for easy layups. Our patience and the ability to beat the press were the keys."

The Lowell highlight was even more impressive given that just two days earlier Lawrence had handed the Wildcats a disapointing 61-46 setback.

In that loss, Lombard was the lone Wildcat to crack double figures with 23 points. He also grabbed 16 rebounds.

On the junior varsity front, coach Larry McGrath's Wildcats fell to Lowell, 61-40 with Mark Bobek (16) and Mike Burns (10) sparking the attack. The Wilmington JV's also lost to Lawrence, 58-44, getting solid efforts from Jason Oliver (12) and Bobek (14).

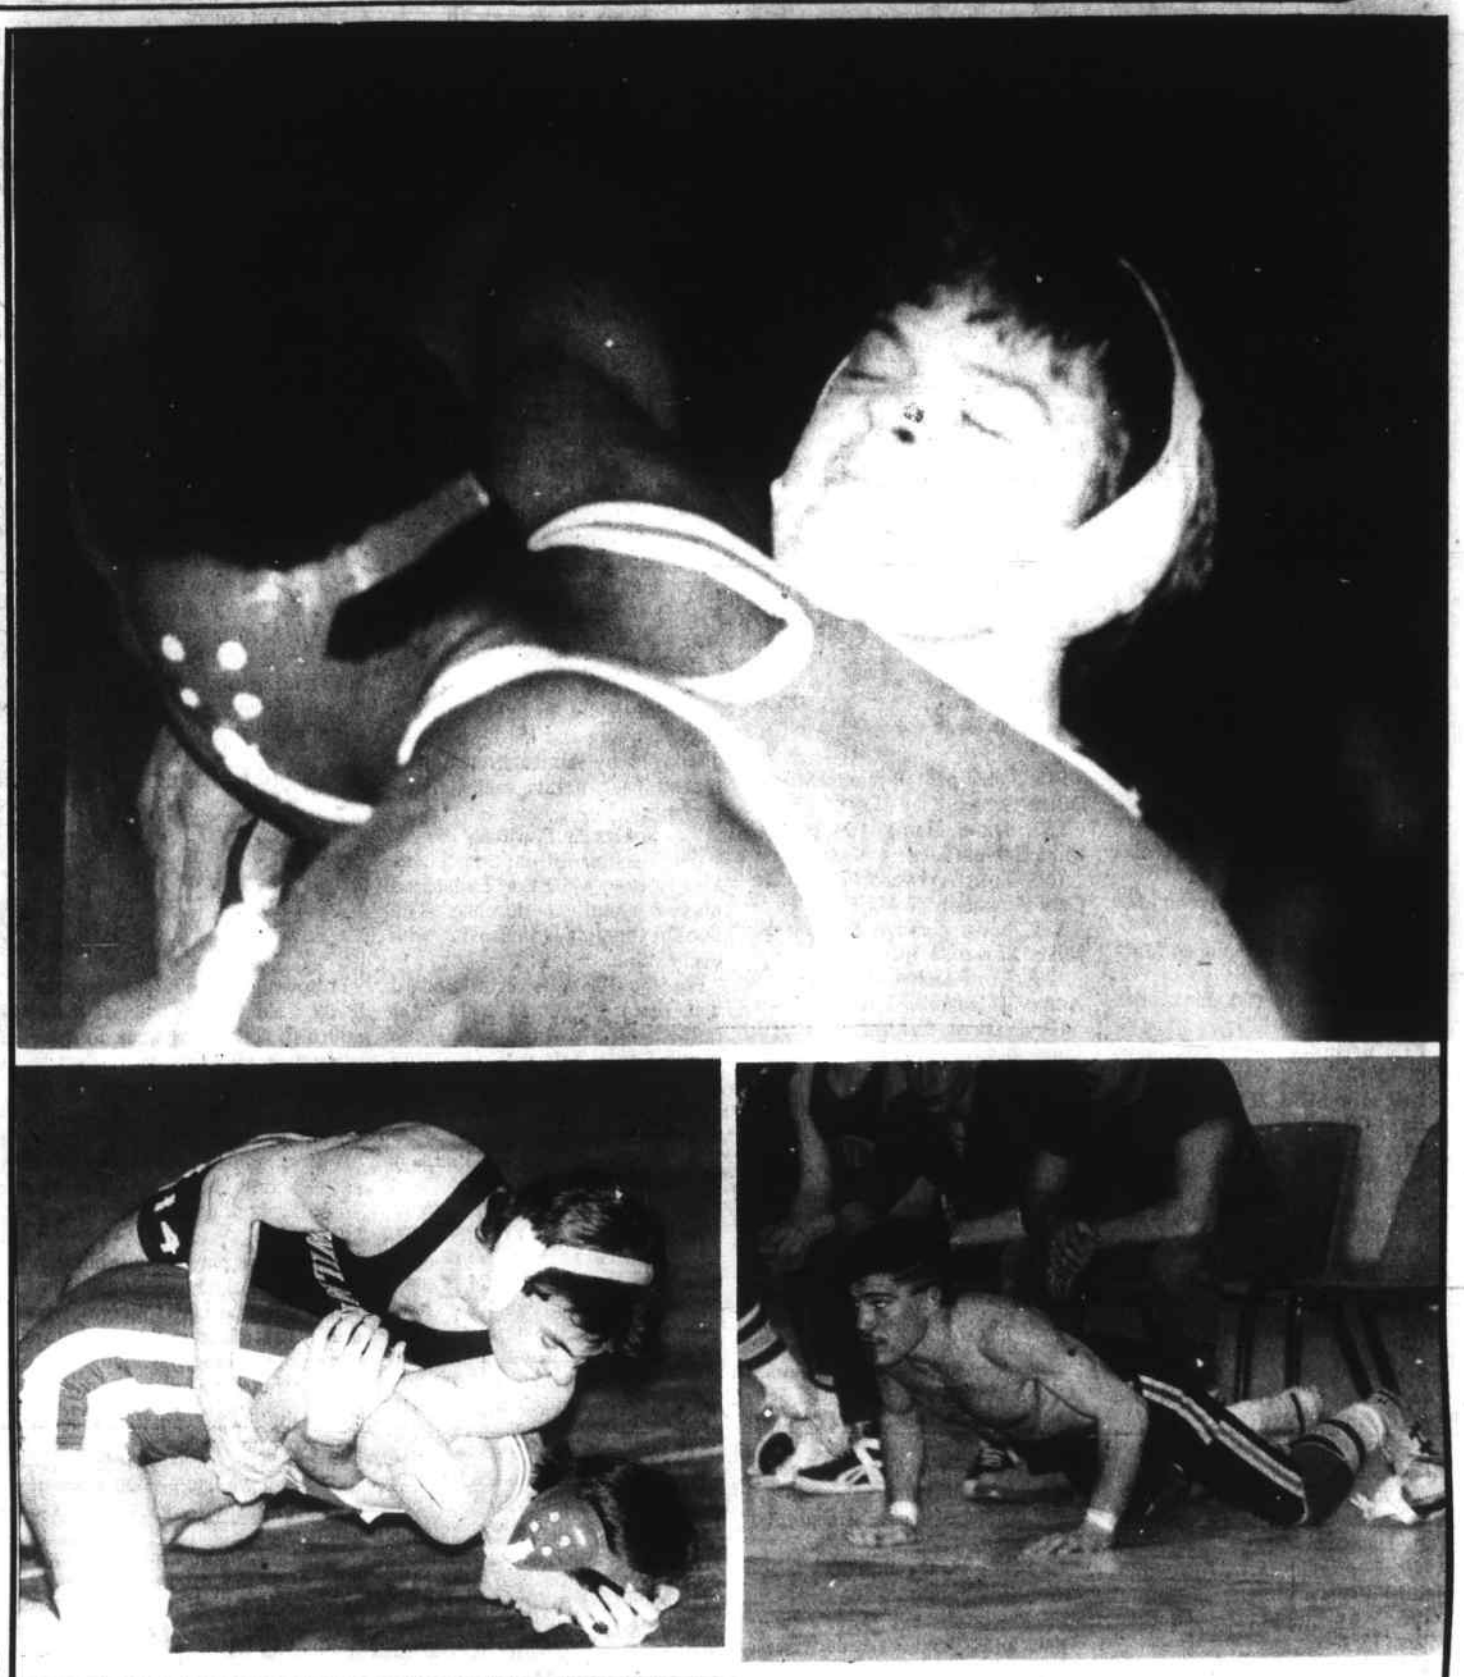

Coach Paul Garrity's TMHS junior varsity at last look were rolling along with a 6-1 slate after drubbing Methuen, 63-45. Guards Jimmy Rogers and Chris Stys have been the Redmen leaders along with center Gerry Keefe.

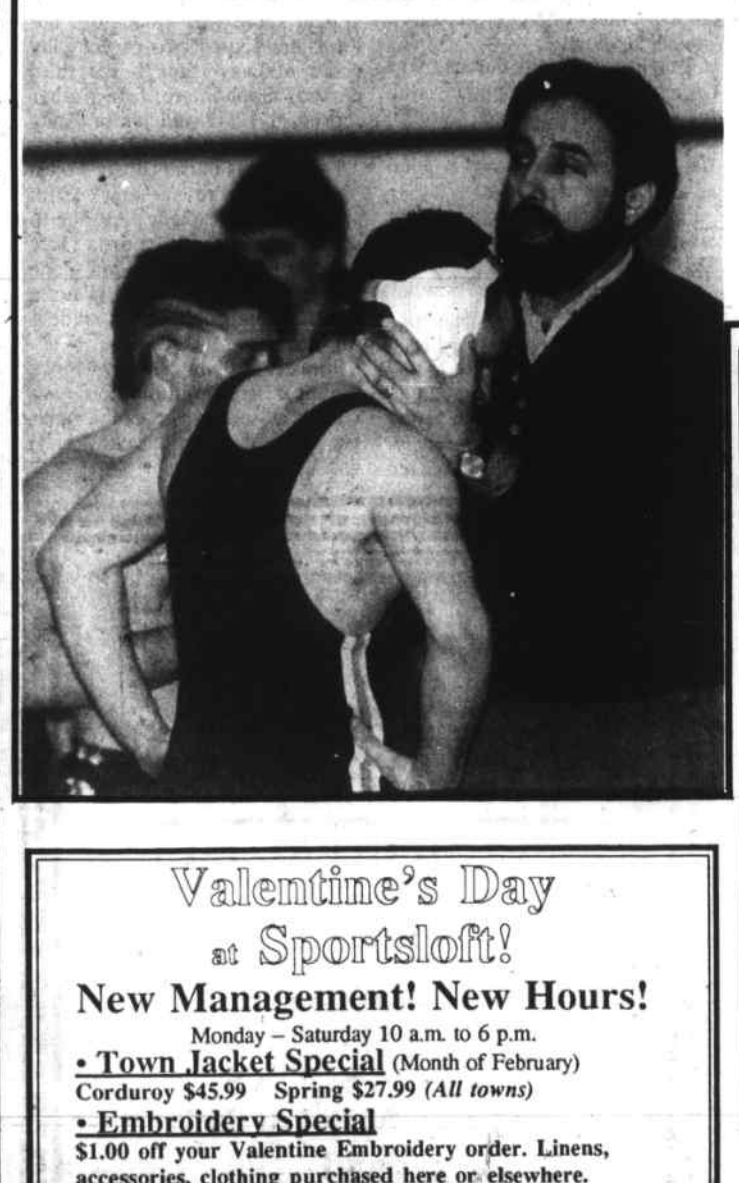

Tuesday night sports

Cats roll, 63-35

The WHS basketball girls' scored their most impressive victory of the season Tuesday night with a 63-35 romp past the Billerica Indians.

The Wildcat scoring leaders were Danielle Fay (16 points), Amy Caruso (11) and Kristin Peters (nine). Wilmington broke the game open with a 21-7 second period surge.

Cats hang tough

Pop Warner meeting

Wilmington Pop Warner is getting underway for the 1988 season. A meeting will be held Thursday, Jan. 28 at 8:15 p.m. at the Fourth of July Headquarters. Officers will be elected for the board of directors. Current members and persons wishing to join the Pop Warner Board of directors will be voted on. Anyone wishing to join the board is invited to attend this meeting.

It should also be noted that the coaching applications for the players and cheerleaders for all teams will be solicited in the near future. It will take a lot of work, but the program is hoping to make the 1988 season even more successful than 1987.

The public is invited to this meeting. Questions should be directed to Len Howard, president of Wilmington Pop Warner at 658-9824.

College Corner

Moran assists Lake Forest

Following a month long semester break, Lake Forest College's teams return to action this week in three of the five winter sports.

Hockey team drops two

The Lake Forest College varsity hockey team visited the University of Michigan-Dearborn Saturday and Sunday, January 9 and 10, dropping both games by scores of 8-2 and 6-3.

"I think we played well, but they were hot," Lake Forest coach Tony Fritz said of the UMD Wolves, who are in first place in the American Collegiate Hockey Association.

"And there's no question we were rusty from the layoff," Fritz added. These were Lake Forest's first games since December 5. "Although we had a good week of practice, it's not the same as a game."

On Friday night, Fritz said, "they did everything absolutely correctly and we did nothing right." The Wolves had a 3-0 lead after one period and led 5-0 after two.

The score was 8-0 before the Foresters scored two power play goals midway through the third period. Sophomore Jeff Sather scored at 12:47 and junior Andy Donnelly scored at 16:52.

The Wolves outshot Lake Forest 39-25. "They're snipers," Fritz said. "You give them a chance to score and they score. Jeff Sandreuther played a good game for us in goal, but this was not a game where goaltending made a difference.

Forester left wing Dennis Moran, a junior from Wilmington, was voted the "second star" of the game. He assisted on both Lake Forest goals.

The next afternoon was somewhat different as the Foresters hung on throughout most of the game only to come up short.

Lake Forest drew two penalties within the first six minutes of the game, enabling the Wolves to convert both powerplay opportunities into goals.

But at 5:42 of the period sophomore Glenn Whalen scored to cut the UMD lead in half. At 6:14 of the second period junior Eric VanAcker tied the game.

After the Wolves scored twice more - at 8:46 and 15:58 - Whalen found the net with 30 seconds to go in the period to make the score 4-3 in favor of UMD.

The Wolves wore the Foresters down during the final period, putting the game away with two goals. "We got tired and we just didn't have enough firepower," Fritz said.

Three players sat out Saturday's game because of injuries suffered Friday: junior right wing Alex Amory, dislocated shoulder; freshman center Randy Williams, dislocated knee; and a key defenseman, junior Jim Kuznar, jammed wrist.

This weekend the Foresters will participate in their own four team tournament, the sixth Forester Classic. The tournament traditionally brings together two midwestern teams and a pair of teams from the east. This year's participants are Augsburg (Minnesota), Bowdoin (Maine), Lake Forest (Illinois) and Middlebury (Vermont).

Bowdoin has won the previous three Forester Classics and as the eighth-ranked team in the nation among Division III schools, is the favorite this year as well.

Lake Forest (3-6-1) will play Middlebury (0-4) in the tournament's first game at 7 p.m. Friday, followed by Augsburg (9-1) vs. Bowdoin (8-1) at 9 p.m.

The consolation game between the losers of the first two games will be played at 4 p.m. Saturday. The winners will play for the championship at 7:30.

All games will be played at the alumni Memorial Hockey Rink on the college campus, Sheridan and Maplewood Roads, Lake Forest.

Tickets are $5 per game or $7 per day. For ticket or other information call 234-3100, ext. 500.

Fashion fights freezing

by Bill Conlon

'Tis the season for ice fishing, but it takes something away from the sport when it also becomes the season for frostbite, hypothermia and misery. How you dress for an ice-fishing sojourn makes all the difference in whether or not you enjoy your day in the winter sun.

So, let's run through a set of proper ice-fishing apparel. For convenience sake, we'll start from the bottom and work our way up, to see what the wise old ice angler is wearing.

Creepers -- these strap-on ice cleats are purely optional, but you'll thank yourself for having them if the ice is as slick as greased marble. My lower back feels like a Marine Corps parade ground after a day of fighting to stand upright, but creepers can change all that.

Boots -- Sorels. If you're going to stand in frozen slush up to your ankles all day, you'd better have the best boots possible. If your feet are cold, you're cold, and the whole day will be full of cussing and snarls. Don't ever skimp on your boots ... buy the best. I like Sorels.

Outerwear -- The two types of "main" outerwear are snowmobile suits and a two-piece pants-and-coat combo. While snowmobile suits are certainly warm enough for a bitter day on the ice, I find them to be a bit TOO warm for sunny days. And slipping out of a snowmobile suit can leave you underdressed, so I always stick with ...

Pants -- My favorites are heavy wool pants for milder days, and nylon ski coveralls for days that are either sloppy or howlingly cold. Cotton long johns or a set of the miracle britches are standard, of course.

Coat -- Make mine a military arctic parka, or else a standard G.I. field jacket for bluebird days. Both are warm in the extreme, with lots of pockets for those loose articles that make life bearable, like a flask of brandy. Under the coat, I like a T-shirt, flannel shirt and a sweater, all three, so I can strip off whatever layers I need to feel comfy in any temperature.

Gloves -- Always buy the heaviest duty items you can find, since gloves take an awful beating while ice-fishing. Better yet, go with mittens, since they're easier to strip off quickly when its time to haul in a fish. Also try to make sure your hand-armor is waterproofed, since wet cold is ten times worse than dry cold. And wet you'll get!

Sunglasses -- Absolutely! When the sun beats down from above, then reflects back up from the surface of the ice, you'll discover how much energy it takes to squint all day. Get the darkest glasses you can find, then keep looking for darker ones. I once saw an ice angler wearing a set of welders' goggles, and he seemed to have no problem with the super-dark glass.

Scarf -- It's a judgement call. If your coat doesn't seal at the neck, an old scarf can carry the day. It's up to you.

Hat -- Your body is like a Thermos bottle. If you leave the cap off, whatever's inside will get very cold, very quickly. Ice fishing folks habitually wear the ugliest headgear on Earth, but all of it is warm and functional. Start with a close-weave knit cap, but once you find the ideal hat you'll fight to the death to keep it. My prize ice hat is an Air Force B-9B flight helmet. It makes me look like a Chinese border guard, but oh man is it ever warm! And ugly too! I love it.

Other -- A few additional pieces of gear can make or break your day. Chap Stick, for example is required. Sun and wind will turn your lips into boot leather if you don't treat them right, so always carry a tube of lip balm. On a sunny day, you might also want to bring along a bottle of sun screen for your nose and cheeks. The air may be cold, but the sunshine isn't.

A pocket hand-warmer is close to cheating, but you won't feel that way once you pull your hands out of the frigid water. It's difficult to fight a fish wearing gloves, so it's the norm to strip off your gloves and battle your prize bare-fisted. Once the fight is done, though, you'll soon learn what a wind chill factor really means.

That about covers it. If you can complete the above list, you'll be as warm as possible, no matter how nasty the weather gets. I've fished in some pretty horrendous weather, and not once has the cold forced me off the ice. In fact, winter is my favorite season, and all because I dress for the cold.

If you prepare adequately for the winter weater, you'll have a whole new season open up for you.

And ice fishing is a sure cure for cabin fever! Enjoy!

-- Tackle Box --

Ice fishing derbies are popping up all over the place, and here are the results from the first event of the season. The Merrimack Valley Bass Masters took over Long Pond in Tyngsboro last Sunday, with 237 anglers signing up to drown their shiners. Quite a nice turnout! The weather was perfect, by the way, with temperatures in the high 30s and just enough cloud cover to keep the sun from blinding everyone. A lovely day indeed.

First place and $200 went to Mark Boutin of Tyngsboro for a 4-pound-10 ounce pickerel. Prizes were given for the five heaviest bass or pickerel, no difference, and trophies went to all five winners as well. Second place also went for a pickerel, with Bill Smith of Tyngsboro hauling in a 4-pound-even specimen for $150.

Bass filled the last three spots, with Pete Semenchuk of Dracut taking third place and $100 for a 3-pound-8 bass; Pat Germain of Lowell hauled down $75 for hauling in a 3-pound-2 bass; and a 2-pound-14 largemouth was worth $50 to Dracut's Frank Pelletier.

Your humble author took part in the Sunday MVBM event, but my snake-bitten ice-fishing luck still holds true. Except for a pound-plus horn pout, I did horribly again. But only 40 or so fish were weighed in all day, so I don't feel quite as bad. Fishing was slow across the pond.

See the nearby schedule of ice fishing events for a full listing of upcoming derbies. I'm trying to list every ice-fishing tournament in the area, so please let me know if I've missed anything. Call me at 658-2346 to fill in any blank spots. Also, I have maps of Tyngsboro's Long Pond and Lake Mascuppic, so let me know if you'd like to see them printed here. It's up to you.

But ice fishing derbies aren't the only events on the slate. Those who would rather avoid the cold have a few indoor events coming up too.

The 22nd annual New England Camping and RV Show will be held in the Bayside Expo center from Jan. 23 to Jan 31. The Bayside Expo center is easily found by taking Exit 15 off the Southeast Distressway.

The indoor biggie of the season will be the 12th annual Eastern Fishing & Outdoor Expo at the Worcester Centrum running Feb. 3 through Feb. 7. Rusty Kraynick of Tewksbury will be there, turning out his custom-made spinnerbaits, and there will be hundreds of other booths, displays, seminars and such. It's really quite an event! On Saturday, Feb. 6, the Division of Fisheries & Wildlife will make its annual awards presentation for the biggest fresh- and salt-water fish taken in 1987, but unfortunately I'm not on that list. (Sigh!)

From Feb. 12 to Feb. 15, look for the 26th annual Camping and Outdoor Show at the Eastern States Exposition center in W. Springfield, Mass. Proceeds go toward camping and conservation efforts.

WHS frosh shine

Several Wilmington High School freshmen impressed with their efforts in Saturday's freshmen-sophomore indoor track meet at Lowell's Riddick Fieldhouse.

Christian Flores took home a first place in the mile with a 5.16 time, while Brian Gillespie also earned top honors with a 35.9 finish in the 300 yard dash.

The other WHS frosh who ran well were Adrian Grise with a 5:33 finish in the mile and Larry Flynn with his 2:53 time in the 1000.

Cripanuk scores victory

Wilmington's Kevin Cripanuk scored his second major meet win of the indoor track season Saturday when he won the 55 meter hurdles at the State Coaches Meet at the Harvard University Cage.

Cripanuk just missed setting the meet record in the event with his winning time of 7.65. The record was set last year by Duxbury's Paul DiPersio with a 7.56 time. Cripanuk earlier placed first in the Boston College Relays with a winning mark of 7.4.

Other Wildcats who enjoyed banner meets Saturday were Paul Maiella with a 10:37.3 personal best in the two mile; senior John Carter with a 4:55.1 finish in the mile race; and Paul DiFronzo with his 2:32.1 effort in the 1000.

The mile relay unit of Cripanuk, Carter, Maiella and DiFronzo also impressed with their 3:44.9 effort in that race.

They are reading in Reading

A town that really loves its library!

By PHYLLIS NISSEN

Real estate agents use its existence and location to charm clients. Residents bring out-of-town guests to the building to show it off. And on winter weeknights, there's standing room only inside.

"Everyone who walks in here for the first time mentions how pleasant and comfortable it is," says Susan Flannery, director of one of the most popular places in town, the Reading Public Library. "Right now we have over 16,000 card holders, almost three-quarters of the Reading population. Twenty-four groups meet here regularly, and sometimes in one day we circulate 1000 books."

The library has been at its present location, a former school, since 1984. The spirit and enthusiasm engendered by the move to that new location are evident today throughout the town. Much more than a building in which books are housed, the Reading Public Library has become the heart of the community — its programs attract entire families, radiating a love for the library and reading into almost every home.

Stories about the move and the way it was handled speak volumes about the reasons for this ongoing relationship. Flannery speaks proudly of the community effort involved, an effort which has won awards for everything from the logo designed for the new building to outstanding public relations.

"More than 1000 volunteers helped move the library," says Flannery. "They used 2000 boxes and 4000 grocery bags. They consumed over 2000 donuts. Everything was donated."

The highlight of that event was the human chain of volunteers from ages two and a half to 75 who moved 80,000 books in record time. Three hundred school children gave up a day of February vacation to move 20,000 books in two hours in grocery bags stamped "handle with enthusiasm," saving the town $20,000.

"Initially, there wasn't enough money to complete the library," says Flannery. "But that turned out to be one of the best things that ever happened. It forced the trustees and community to seek other sources of funding — individuals, businesses, clubs, and organizations. It gave all of them, in effect, a piece of the pie. It made them feel this was their library, and that's not an easy feeling to engender."

"That feeling has carried over," she says. "We continue to get small donations from individuals and community groups. The money raised privately allowed the library to buy beautiful furnishings which greatly enhance the ambience."

None of the clientele come to borrow videos — there aren't any. Relatively few come for the records, tapes or "talking books." They flock there in droves for the reading material and the atmosphere. "In this age of television and videos, it's amazing that we have so many readers," says Flannery. "We offer a fairly traditional program in that we concentrate almost exclusively on books."

The Reading Public Library is one of the most successful in Massachusetts with a per capita circulation of 12, higher than any other town in the immediate area, in the top 10 percent statewide. "That speaks well of our quality of service and of what people think of the library," says Flannery, "and it also speaks well of the values and priorities in Reading. The people have consistently supported their library not just by paying lip service to it but actually using it."

The immediate past president of the Massachusetts Library Association, Flannery has worked in several libraries — in Wakefield, Lexington, Newton, and abroad. "A lot of com-

Austin Prep celebrates 25th with Remembrance Day

Austin Preparatory School in Reading concluded a year-long celebration of the twenty-fifth anniversary of its founding at a special Remembrance Day, held last month at the school. Guest of honor for the occasion was the Most Rev. John J. Mulcahy, Auxiliary Bishop of Boston and Regional Bishop for the Reading area. Bishop Mulcahy was the principal celebrant and delivered the homily at a special Mass dedicated to honoring the memory of all deceased members of the Austin Preparatory School community.

MOST REV. JOHN J. MULCAHY, Auxiliary Bishop of Boston, chats with Austin Prep's Director of Student Activities George M. Miller (center) and Trustee H. Andrew Brodecki (both of Reading) at a reception following the school's Remembrance Day Mass. Bishop Mulcahy was the principal concelebrant at the Mass, which honored the memory of all the deceased members of the Austin Preparatory School community. In his homily, Bishop Mulcahy spoke of the concerns and imperatives that have inspired and supported Catholic education over the years. He also singled out for special praise all the individuals — living and deceased — who played a role in the development of Austin Prep.

Concelebrating the Mass with Bishop Mulcahy were the Rev. Arthur F. Smith, O.S.A., a founding member of the Austin faculty who retired last summer after twenty-four years at the school. Father Smith is now associated with the Augustinian Provincial Archives in Villanova, Pennsylvania. Other concelebrants were the Rev. James R. Flynn, O.S.A., Chairman of the Austin Prep Mathematics Department, and the Rev. John D. Harrington, a priest of the Westminster (England) Archdiocese now teaching in the Austin Prep Religious Studies Department.

Music for the Mass was provided by organist Mrs. Andrea Carroll and singers Mr. Michael Benware of the Austin English Department, Mr. John E. O'Keeffe, Jr., of Burlington, and his son Paul R. O'Keeffe, a member of Austin's Senior Class. In addition, members of the Austin Prep Student Council took active part in the Mass. These included Student Council

The course meets on six consecutive Thursdays from 6 to 7 p.m. at Winchester Hospital. Sue Powers, R.N., community health educator, and Pamela Cote, R.D., dietitian, will lead the course. Speakers are members of the Winchester Hospital staff. Each week participants weigh in, view films, discuss their nutritional programs, share menus and recipes, and set up individual and group exercise programs.

There is still time to register, which may be done by calling the Education Department. Participants are asked to make an appointment for individualized nutrition counseling with one of the hospital's registered dietitians, and to bring copies of any current diets to that consultation.

Fees are $8 for a 15-minute consultation and $25 for the course. When accompanied by a written physician's order for weight reduction, the consultation fee may be covered by one's health insurance. For more information and registration, individuals are asked to contact Ms. Powers at 729-9000, Ext. 3010.

'Hear, hear' for New England Memorial

I HEARD THAT! — A diagnostic hearing test is given to a young patient in the New England Memorial Hospital Department of Speech-Language Pathology and Audiology. The department was awarded accreditation by the American Speech-Language-Hearing Association.

The department of speech-language pathology and audiology at New England Memorial Hospital, in Stoneham, has been awarded accreditation by the American Speech-Language-Hearing Association (ASHA).

Fewer than 300 institutions nationwide have earned this accreditation, which was received following an extensive evaluation and review of the department's staff, clinical practices and procedures, records, physical facilities, equipment and quality assurance. The department will be reviewed annually to ensure that it meets ASHA standards.

"The accreditation is a public acknowledgement of our professional excellence," said Pat Murphy, chief of speech-language pathology and audiology. "It assures the public that the program meets stringent national standards and that the staff and services are of the highest caliber. We are thrilled that ASHA has recognized our efforts towards quality patient care."

Audiology offers full diagnostic and rehabilitative services for people with hearing impairments or medical problems with their auditory system. Hearing loss is identified and a determination is made on the need for rehabilitation. Among its many services, the department evaluates children with ear infections, performs computerized hearing tests on infants and has recently begun a hearing aid dispensing program.

Speech-language pathology provides evaluation and therapy for preschoolers experiencing delayed speech and language development. The department also evaluates and offers therapy for stuttering, voice disorders and communication difficulties following a stroke, head injury or trauma.

For further information about the services provided by the department of speech-language pathology and audiology at New England Memorial Hospital, please call 665-1740.

Speak up for endangered species

Every animal at Stone Zoo has a story to tell — and each needs a Zoo Guide to help tell it. Stone Zoo is looking for community volunteers to bring exciting and in-depth information to the public. Volunteer Zoo Guides teach visitors of all ages about the important role of zoos in the preservation of wildlife and endangered species like the Mediterranean Mouflon.

Mouflon are native to the islands of Sardinia and Corsica off the coast of Italy. Their exhibit at Stone Zoo reflects the mountainous terrain of their natural habitat. The Mouflon are well camouflaged and blend in with the rocky surroundings. When the herd is resting at the zoo they are often difficult to spot. One Mouflon is usually easy to find. It's on guard duty.

These are just a few of the interesting facts you can learn and share by becoming a Zoo Guide volunteer. An informative training program prepares you to communicate the world of animals to zoo visitors. Animal behavior, adaptations, diets, habitats, and teaching techniques are all part of these comprehensive classes. It's free. You only pay with interest, enthusiasm and time — a rare opportunity.

The 10 weekly classes begin in February and meet every Friday from 9:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. If you would like more information call the Stone Zoo Education Department at 438-5100. It's a great feeling to know that you can make a difference.

Meetings of the group are free and open to the public. For further information, call Margaret Dwyer, R.N., director of Ambulatory Services, 729-9000, Ext. 3253.

Free trees!

The National Arbor Day Foundation is giving ten free trees to each person who becomes a Foundation member during January, 1988.

To become a member of the Foundation and to receive the free trees, a $10 membership contribution should be sent to Ten Trees, National Arbor Day Foundation, 100 Arbor Avenue, Nebraska City, Ne. 68410 by January 31, 1988.

Library

munities fund their library pretty well but they don't really use it," she says. "People here feel the library is a very important part of their lives. Lexington has the highest per capita circulation is the state but approximately 25 percent of that circulation is to non-residents. Reading has comparatively low non-resident usage, under 10 percent.

"Since the new building opened on March 3, 1984, we've had a 15 percent increase in annual circulation and a 23 percent increase in cardholders," she says. "That's a tremendous increase in use and most particularly, in the groups that feel some identification with the library. Just about every night of the week, they use the meeting room. They participated in fund-raising when this building was being furnished so they feel it's theirs.

"Reading's citizens are very proud of their library because they feel a stake in it and there aren't very many communities where that happens," she continues. "It's not something artificially plopped down here. It's something they helped to create."

That attitude has created an atmosphere which perpetuates itself in wonderful ways. "The other remarkable thing about being here is that, with very minor exceptions, this building still looks as good as the day we moved into it," says Flannery. "To me that represents the respect the community has for this place and the recognition that it is such a lovely place they want to keep it that way. Of course, the custodial staff really keeps on top of things, too."

The building itself was not originally intended to be a library; the research and love that went into its transformation overcame structural limitations and oddities to the point where other communities consider them features to emulate. "A lot of initially negative things wound up being positive," says Flannery. "In most libraries, the children's room is in the basement. The thinking has always been that children make too much noise; therefore, if you put them in the basement they don't have to go through much space to get there and they don't disturb real people.

"In this case, the structural requirements to support the weight of books are more than this building could support," she continues, "so the decision was made to put most of the books in the basement."

The decision was then made to put the children's room on the second floor. "In fact, that was a stroke of genius," says Flannery. "As a result, we probably have the nicest children's room I have ever seen because of the light and large windows and the airiness of the space.

"Certainly, if you want to make a beautiful space in a library, you want to make it for kids," she says. "It's an impression they'll have for the rest of their lives. We should do our best marketing and our best selling to kids. It's really important that they have a beautiful, joyful space so they understand that libraries are fun, welcoming, pleasant places to be. A lot of libraries are starting to look at us and emulate us."

Absolutely in tune with the new building are the inspired programs the whole staff turns out year after year. Amazing as they are, the statistics are only surface indications of the flourishing programs behind them. More than 1000 children and young teens participated in this year's summer reading club — including 38 percent of Reading's elementary school population. July and August marked a 21 percent increase in circulation over the same period last summer. At times during that period, the daily circulation reached an extraordinary 1200 books.

In June, "Readasaurus Rex" visited all 60 elementary classes in town, children's librarian Corinne Fisher and crew working their annual magic into every possible variation on dinosaur. A tar pit, a dinosaur painted on the library parking lot, and 100-percent genuine 450,000,000 year old fossils given out as rewards for every 15 books read were part of the theme. This summer, the children's circulation was almost half the total circulation of the library. "In most libraries, it hovers around 25 percent," says Flannery. "That's a dramatic statistic for us in terms of looking at where we're going to spend our money."

This summer's "Reading Raffle," the first program for middle schoolers, attracted almost 100 of "a very hard group to reach." More than 50 middle school kids participated in the library's first cultural trip for their age group, the opening night performance of "The Big River" in Boston.

The relationship between library and school is excellent also. Last year's "Art of the Book" grant bought dozens of speakers, authors, illustrators, and poets to both; the recently awarded "Literature Alive" grant, another joint venture, is similar. Class visits — students to library and librarians to schools — during September and October were up 54 percent.

Programs for the whole family pack the place also. In November, a Friday night program wiith the "West of the Moon" storytellers drew about 250 people. Waiting lists made the story hours never before offered in December and January a necessity this year; the five new hours for two-year-olds are full and going strong.

"As a result of a grant two years ago, we started buying a lot of books in large print and spending more money on cassettes for people who might have difficulty reading," says Flannery. "We've also introduced a monthly coffee hour for senior citizens which has just exceeded everybody's expectations. We have a full house every month."

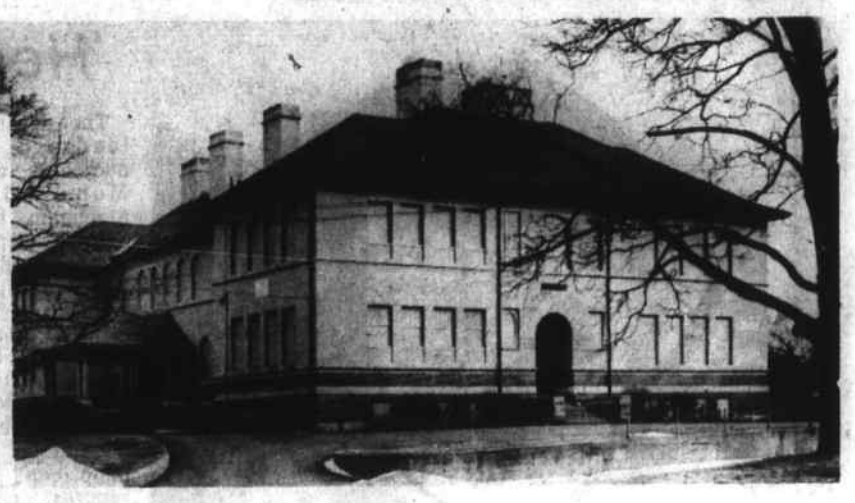

Then there are the summer circulations to commuters at the Reading depot; the monthly newsletters in regular and large print; the computer network offering immediate access to more than one million titles; "The Sixth Grader's Guide to the Library" in conjunction with a field trip there and gimmicks like certificates for free reserves and overdues to entice middle schoolers to bridge the gap between the children's and adult collections.

"I've worked in a lot of libraries but there has never been the kind of feeling there is here," says Flannery. "People think of other libraries as public institutions, not as theirs personally, and that's the big difference. The people in Reading always want to do things for us — lovely things happen here. The Garden Club wants to decorate the library. Jack Cairl and Barbara Mellin donated the profits from their book on the town forest to the library. Claire Friedman donated a wooden dollhouse with furniture to the picture book room.

"That never happened in other communities where I worked," she continues. "We get a lot of memorial gifts also. Things dribble in from all corners of the universe to this library — because people do feel so closely identified with it."

The biggest problem at the Reading Library is the too frequent standing room only with the crowd's accompanying low "roar" and so many "embarrassingly" empty shelves during the summer. Both proud and troubled by these situations, the staff has, with humor, launched "all quiet on the reference front," a campaign to quiet the crowds; and grant-writing continues in search of funds to fill those shelves with books to thrill even the youngest cardholders.

As for Reading's love affair with reading, you can explain it by the new library building, you can explain it by the thrust of continuously innovative programs. Or maybe, you don't need to explain it at all. Maybe it's inherent in the name of the town.

DRIVEN FROM A CAREER

Juliet Brudney, co-author of "Forced Out," a book exploring the reasons "Why veteran employees are driven from their careers and what they can do" will speak about her book at Aquinas Junior College in Newton on Thursday, January 28 at 8 p.m. at the school's Student Lounge.

"Forced Out: Why Veteran Employees Are Driven From Their Careers and What They Can Do" (Fireside/Simon and Schuster, Oct. 1987, $7.95) by Juliet Brudney and Hilda Scott relates the experiences of over 100 professional employees who were forced to leave their prestigious positions in large companies, or to take early retirements as an alternative to being fired.

The book questions why "older workers who should be gaining popularity, lose their jobs at an increasingly early age." The book offers advice on Fighting Back; Job Hunting Strategies and Battle Fatigue. It concludes that "If older people mobilize to challenge job-loss inequities and age discrimination in employment, those who create and perpetuate the problems will face a formidable foe."

Aquinas Junior College is located at 15 Walnut Park in Newton. For further information on the lecture call the school at 969-4400.

Ms. Isenberg is an experienced counselor/educator who specializes in helping individuals determine and reach their work-related goals. The Couch Trip
Return of the Living Dead, Part 2

The Couch Trip Starring Dan Aykroyd, Charles Grodin, Walter Matthau, Donna Dixon. Directed by Michael Ritchie. Produced by Lawrence Gordon. Screenplay by Steven Kampmann, Will Porter and Sean Stein. Rated R (profanity).

Just so no one thinks I need my head examined, I know that The Couch Trip is a lousy movie. I know it's trite and implausible and about as sophisticated as a Jerry Lewis comedy. But I remember a time or two, well before puberty, when Lewis made me laugh. And, as absolutely silly as The Couch Trip is, it also made me laugh. So call it a guilty pleasure.

Dan Aykroyd leads the cast of fools in this Michael Ritchie film. You may recall Ritchie. He was once a fine director who made movies like The Candidate and the entertaining, if low-brow Semi-Tough. But lately his credits include such monstrously bad films as Wildcats, Fletch and Eddie Murphy's big bomb, The Golden Child. He brought the same leaden touch and discombobulated direction to this flick, so let it be known right up front that it isn't the telling of the story, or the story, that's funny. But Aykroyd is.

Another veteran of bad movies, Aykroyd has clomped through so many disasters that you tend to forget he was once very funny on TV where he used his deadpan delivery to pitch the Bass-O-Matic or imitate Richard Nixon. But lately the delivery has been more dead than deadpan, so it's a pleasant surprise to see him relying more on his old line of patter than the dumb disguises and sight gags he employed in Dragnet or Dr. Detroit.

Aykroyd plays a mental patient who is faking insanity to avoid a prison sentence. He's both smart and beligerent, a combination that drives his shrink crazy. In a plot device that manages to avoid all reasonable conventions, Aykroyd manages to escape from the hospital by intercepting a phone call meant for the spineless shrink (David Clennon). Aykroyd then heads for sunny Beverly Hills, where he takes over the duties of a popular radio doctor by pretending to be Clennon.

The doctor of the airwaves, Charles Grodin, is in the midst of a breakdown and is having a pretty manic time of it, resulting in an unstructured, if energetic performance by Grodin. You get the impression it's supposed to be a big laugh that Aykroyd, the patient, is saner than the mind medics, but the joke is as old and flat as it sounds.

Unfortunately, the plot only deteriorates from the opening sequence. Walter Mattau shows up as Aykroyd's sidekick, looking wild and weird in a minister's uniform and sporting a strange, black wig. Aykroyd's wife, Donna Dixon, isn't too bad as the love interest. And this is exactly the kind of movie you'd expect a former cheesecake model to appear in, but Walter Matthau?

So, your probably wondering where the funny part comes in. Well, throughout all this drivel Aykroyd keeps cracking sarcastic remarks with a straight face, and he's funny. Although you may cringe to find yourself laughing at such a dumb movie — it's akin to admitting you like the Three Stooges. However, it certainly isn't suggested that you encourage mediocre films by patronizing this movie, so you might want to wait until it's on TV which should be, oh, in about a week or so.

Return of the Living Dead, Part II Starring James Karen, Thom Matthews, Michael Kenworthy. Written and directed by Ken Wiederhorn. Produced by Tom Fox. Rated R (profanity, violence).

A precocious preteen, green vapor, slimy brains and rejuvenated corpses. Who could ask for anything more? Like maybe a little good taste.

No, who'd want a zombie flick that was nice and neat and presentable. Nah. Oozy and giggly and stupid. That's what a zombie movie should be and that's what you'll get for a ticket to Return of the Living Dead, Part Two

Why the producers tacked the "Part Two" onto the title is a mystery, as calling this a sequel is kind of like calling it art. In the end of the original movie, the army nuked a zombie-infested town and included in the list of the (living) dead were the two leads in this segment, James Karen and Thom Matthews. But here they are, risen once again from obscurity to lead this cast of unknowns onto even greater anonymity. Tom Fox, who also produced part one, obviously thinks his audiences' brains are as petrified as his characters. And to be perfectly frank, anyone who forks out money for this glop is living up to that opinion.

Plot. Well, all you need to know is that the army is transporting some tanks which happen to fall off a truck which happen to contain zombies in a green gas. Yes, the tanks break, yes the precocious kid in the small town figures out what is going on, and yes, there are a lot of scummy-looking pig entrails spread around the set, passed off as brains.

The bottom line is that the movie is so bad it's funny, but it will be just as funny on video as it is in the theatre. Unfortunately this seems to be a common trait these days, as producers sell cable and video rights when they finance their films, making them, like Return look as if it were shot for an itty bitty scream, ah, screen.

THE COUCH TRIP starring Walter Matthau and Dan Aykroyd is like an old Jerry Lewis movie.

Short Takes

Good Morning, Vietnam is little more than a showcase for the comedic talents of Robin Williams, who shines as the disruptive disc jockey who shook up Southeast Asia with his controversial radio shows. However, there is almost no plot to encase William's brilliant performance, so about halfway through you are ready to pack it in. One wonders why this man continues to appear in mediocre movies when his gifts seem more suited for a concert film. Rated R.* *

For Keeps is a miserable little drama with comic undertones that fails to be funny. It's supposed to be a realistic tale of teen pregnancy, but is about as true-to-life as an Afterschool Special. Molly Ringwald plays the expectant superteen who manages to do it all, get married, graduate from high school, have a baby and go on to college. One wonders if the writers have ever experienced life in this century. Rated PG-13.

The Whales of August is not unlike a sentimental Hallmark commercial. It gives you a nice slice of life, but no story around it. Bette Davis and Lillian Gish play two aged sisters bickering through what may be their last season together at Gish's Maine cottage. The problem is that the dialogue is trite and the transparent storyline is almost devoid of plot. These two movie legends deserved better. * *½

Batteries Not Included is an amalgamation of nearly every fantasy, sci-fi flick threaded through a projector in the last 10 years. The acting is fine, and while it is nice to see Hume Cronyn and Jessica Tandy together again, it isn't worth putting up with this sickly sweet story and cloyingly cute aliens. Rated PG. *½

Overboard starts out as a stretch for Goldie Hawn and quickly dissipates into a silly gigglefest as she plays out a tired story of a rich amnesiac thrust into a life of poverty. Kurt Russell tries to reprogram the spoiled Hawn into a motherly housewife, but despite the happy ending, this movie is no sunken treasure. Director Garry Marshall deserves a lot of the blame for this cliche-ridden, tasteless "comedy." Rated PG.*

The Last Emperor is a beautiful, sprawling, epic tale of the last man to sit on the royal throne of China. It suffers from being too long, but is still fascinating nonetheless. Italian director Bernardo Bertolucci captures the essence of the great Oriental dynasties while spinning his tale of corruption and power. Now if it were only 30 minutes shorter....Rated PG-13.* * *

Throw Mama from the Train is a funny take-off on Hitchcock's Strangers on a Train with Danny DeVito as the childlike victim of a boorish mama he's just dying to kill. Enter Billy Crystal, a writer suffering from a huge mental block, thanks to the plagiaristic shenanigans of his ex-wife. This becomes a very funny movie as the bumpy paths of these two losers cross. Rated PG-13. * * *½

The Dead is John Huston's swan song and it couldn't have been lovelier. A close adaptation of a short story by James Joyce, it is about the revels of a group of turn-of-the century Dubliners, one of whom reveals a smoldering passion for a long dead love. Leisurely paced ard richly detailed, this is the crowning jewel in a memorable career. Rated PG.* * * *

The Wannsee Conference is a chilling docu-drama about the coming together of top Nazis who planned the "final solution." A straightforward enactment of that famous meeting, this is probably too dry for most tastes, as it is very similar to the kind of films we watched in school.* *

Broadcast News is a funny, if somewhat disjointed story that mixes love and TV newscasts. Holly Hunter sparkles as the neurotic, opinionated, vibrant producer caught between a handsome anchor, William Hurt, with less than spectacular brain power and the bright, but less charismatic news reporter, played by Albert Brooks. Rated R.* * *

Housekeeping spins the strange tale of an eccentric aunt (Christine Lahti) put in charge of her two teenaged nieces. Suicide and eccentricity run in the family, but so does humor, so this black film is also very funny. Scottish director Bill Forsyth pushed things too far with the ending, but all in all this is a very original, entertaining, unusual film. Rated PG. * * *½

Manon of the Spring is the golden, fluid, sad sequel to "Jean de Florette" and is one of the most completely perfect films ever produced. Manon returns to the small French village where she was raised in order to avenge the death of her father, and finds the meaning of true love and forgiveness in the bargain. However, if you don't like Greek tragedy, you won't enjoy this drama. Rated PG * * * *

Woodchips

By ANTHONY MANCONI

Woodchips' wish for the New Year, "Climb every mountain. Ford every stream, Chase every rainbow. Until you achieve your dreams."

My grandmother was in her 80's and didn't hear too well. She refused my offer to get her a modern hearing aid, preferring to use an ear trumpet belonging to my grandfather. I took her with me to Midnight Mass one Christmas Eve years ago. She put the ear trumpet down on the pew and when Vic Grasso, the usher, spotted it he came over to me and said, "Woodchipper, I'm warning you, one 'toot' out of that thing and 'out' she goes."

Clara Moore was cleaning Roger's closet and found two empty whiskey bottles. When Roger, (now retired from the Boston Gas Co.), came home from work Clara asked, "What do you know about those empty whiskey bottles?" Roger raised his right hand and said, "I swear, I never bought an 'empty' whiskey bottle in my life." Roger, do you mind if I use that wonderful answer?

Dan Delaney, Frank Grayson and Jim Sullivan are security guards at P.F. O'Connor, world's largest building supply warehouse in Revere. The name reminds me of Uncle John Shea when he was the hiring foreman of longshoremen on the Charlestown piers and docks. One morning a young man asked John for a job. "Are you Irish?" Uncle John bellowed. "No," the young man meekly answered, "but my grandmother is." "Good," John said with a smile, "tell your grandmother to report to Pier Four at five in the morning!"

Since the dawn of creation man has wondered as he looks up at the stars if there are other forms of intelligent beings somewhere in space. Kevin O'Hara asked me, "Do you believe in UFO's?" "Of course not!" I replied. "Do you believe in flying saucers?" "After last night I certainly do." "Don't tell me that you sighted one," Kevin asked. "More than one. It started when Kathy said, 'Look at me, I have the body of a 19-year-old girl.'" I couldn't help saying, "You better give it back, you're getting it all wrinkled!" That started a fusillade of our best plates being thrown at me. Luckily I deftly dodged them all but a coffee cup which hit me on the right ear.

A man carrying a tool box rang Paul Rao's doorbell then said to Paul, "I'm the plumber, I'm here to repair the leaking water pipe." "But I don't need a plumber," Paul exclaimed. "Aren't you Mr. Mathews?" "No, Mr. Mathews moved a year ago." "How do you like that," the man snapped, "he called for a plumber saying that it was an emergency then he 'ups' and moves away!"

Walter Woods told me that there's a 'piggy back' railroad that's called 'Hamtrack.'

Retired letter carrier George Gould advised me to buy as many 22 cent stamps as I can before they go up to 25 cents. I still have a few 18 cent stamps I haven't used yet.

Nancy Kerrigan of Stoneham is practicing for her first appearance in the senior's competition of the U.S. Figure Skating Championships in Denver, Colo. Kathy tried figure skating but, with her figure it was ridiculous. I told her, "If I had to do it all over again guess who I'd marry?" "Who," she snapped. "You." She snapped right back with, "That's what you think fatso!"

Woodchips' Personality Winners, Susan Small, Paula Fairfield, Paul Evans, Michael Kravchuck, Guy Cartwright, Mary Kelly, Willie Cobb (a Kentucky Kernel), Mary Venizia, Lee DeBell, Gale Costello, Frank Guiliano, Richard Hammel, Mary Pat Couig, Diane Prince and Pam MacKill.

A doctor called Robert Burns and said, "Your check bounced back." "Oh yeah," replied Bob, "so did my arthritis!"

I always knew it, and every passing day substantiates it, the 'bigger' they are the 'easier' it is to talk to them. On the Carrier Wasp it was a lot easier for me to talk to the Captain than an Ensign.

James Beebe is the director of the U.S. Food and Drug Administration, Northeast Region I, which includes all the New England states, New York and Puerto Rico. Mr. Beebe, from Wakefield, is a charismatic, congenial and friendly person. He and I are on a first name basis (his wish). I've seen stock room attendants who must be addressed as 'sir' before paper clips are issued.

Many of my friends are in Florida for the winter. The greatest sport for most of them is 'not' basking in the sun, fishing or sightseeing, it's reading or hearing that the Boston area is hit by a nine inch snowstorm and the chill factor is 10 degress below zero. They then individually and collectively feel sorry for us up north. "Baloney!"

Joe Gouveia took Lisa Dooley to his college's football game. "See that big guy, number 15, he's going to be our best man next year." Lisa, a beautiful blonde 'bombshell' exclaimed, "It's about time you proposed to me!"

Woodchips congratulates Mrs. James Higgins who recently celebrated her 100th birthday. She is the grandmother of James Burke, first grade teacher at North Reading's Hood School. When my Uncle John Shea of North Reading was asked to make a speech at his 85th birthday party he said, "If I knew I was going to live this long I would have taken better care of myself."

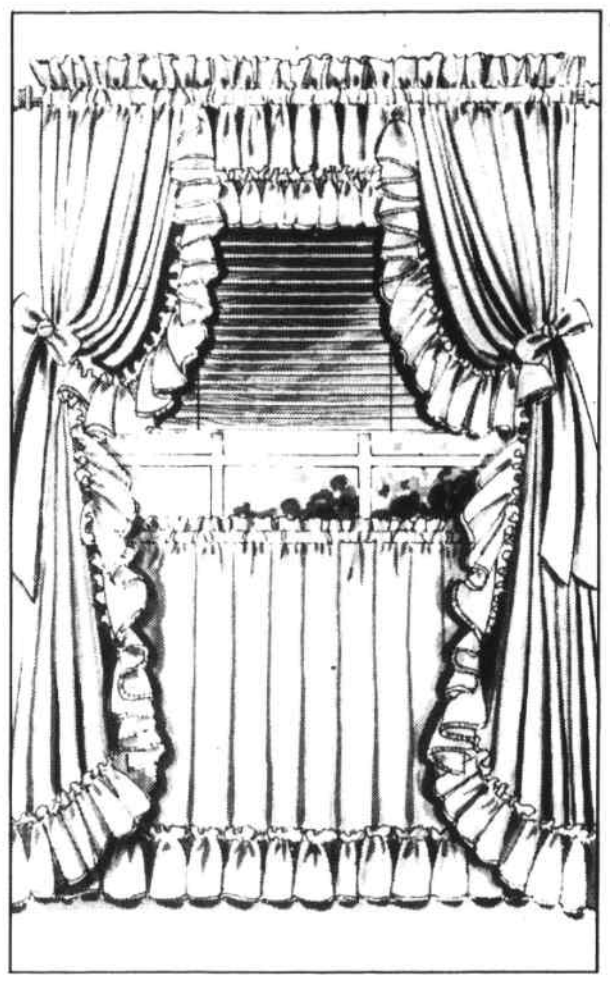

I congratulate Kenneth Krzesowski and his parents Mr. and Mrs. Emery Krzesowski on Ken's receiving the Eagle Scout award as a member of Troop 706 in Reading. The presentation was made by Don Morrison, scoutmaster Troop 706, and Frank Hofmann, former scoutmaster of North Reading Troop 776. Ken, I fully appreciate the talent you must have to win all those merit badges.

I was a member of Troop 17 Beaver Patrol. Two years later my mother had my teeth straightened and I was drummed out. At a Boy Scout Jamboree in the knot tying contest I tied the first knot around a log and other scouts ran down and tied square, sheepshank, etc. The mistake I made was tying a 'slip knot' instead of a 'timber hitch' so the last Boy Scout of my troop pulled and the log stayed right there.

Bob Kelley's driveway is next to mine. I always wondered why with a five-inch snowfall I have 10 inches of snow on my driveway. Now I know. Bob bought a snowthrower and he does his driveway before I get home from work.

CHINESE THOUGHT INTERPRETED

"The World of Thought in Ancient China" is a major work by Benjamin I. Schwartz and the subject of the next Cambridge Forum. Dr. Schwartz is Professor of History and Political Science, Emeritus, at Harvard University, and author of numerous articles, papers and books.

He will discuss "The World of Thought in Ancient China," which newly interprets Confucianism, Taoism and the Five Classics.

Professor Schwartz will be speaking at the Cambridge Forum, Wednesday, January 20, at 8 p.m. This Forum event will be at 3 Church Street, Harvard Square and it's free and open to the public.

GLORY DAYS OF SILENT FILM

Return to the glory days of silent films with pianist Stuart Oderman in his New England debut accompanying films of Buster Keaton and Harold Lloyd. The free program will be held on Sunday, Jan. 24, at 2 p.m. at the Museum of Our National Heritage in Lexington. Composer and pianist Oderman will provide live accompaniment to "Cops" with Buster Keaton (1922) and "Safety Last," starring Harold Lloyd (1923).

In his classic, "Cops," with its perfectly-timed gags, Keaton portrays an innocent who disrupts a parade and is pursued by a horde of policemen. "Safety Last," directed by Fred Newmeyer, chronicles Lloyd's desperate attempt to earn enough money to marry co-star Mildred Davis, including climbing a 12-story building and swinging from its giant clock.

For more information, call the museum at 861-6559.

CELEBRATE CHINESE NEW YEAR

Lafayette Place, Downtown Boston's Shopping Center, will celebrate the Year of the Dragon with a Chinese Culture Week, Saturday, February 6 through Friday, February 12.

This unique collaboration with the Chinese Culture Institute of Boston will bring professional artists, musicians, dancers, martial artists and more to Lafayette Place for a week-long celebration of Chinese culture.

Exhibitions mounted throughout the center will feature Ching Dynasty costumes; clothing from several Chinese ethnic minorities; Chinese painting and calligraphy; and the history of the Chinese people in Massachusetts.

Other highlights include a hands-on Chinese crafts workshop for children and a special dragon dance performed by children from the Josiah Quincy School.

For more information call: 542-7373.

CRUISES FOR BIRD-WATCHERS

Set sail on M V Voyager, the New England Aquarium's 77-foot vessel, for an eight-hour Winter Seabird Watching Excursion on Saturday, February 20th. Voyager departs Hyannis at 8 a.m. on a journey to rich seabird feeding grounds such as Muskeget Channel, Nantucket Sound and the Nantucket shoals. The cruise is sponsored by the New England Aquarium and the Massachusetts Audubon Society.

Join bird sighting naturalists for an opportunity to observe winter seabirds and possibly whales. Participants can expect to see a variety of feathered species, amongst them gannets, gulls including kittywakes and bonapart's gulls, and seaducks such as eiders, scoters, and oldsquaws. These northern breeders winter off of Nantucket, feeding on rich shellfish beds in shallow waters. Shipboard naturalists will also be keeping a sharp eye out for gray seals known to breed on the southern tip of the Muskeget Channel. Right whales and minke whales may be sighted during the winter months in the Nantucket area as well.

The M V Voyager, equipped with a full galley, departs at 8 a.m. from Ocean Street Dock, at the Hyline Ferry Terminal, Hyannis, Ma. Parking is available. The cost of the excursion is $40 for Aquarium and Massachusetts Audubon Society members and $45 for non-members. Space capacity is limited to 69 persons and reservations are required. Reservations can be made through the New England Aquarium's Sales Office, 973-5206 or through the Massachusetts Audubon Society, 259-9500, ext. 7410 or ext. 7411.

The following is the remaining Nature Cruise Schedule for 1988: March 19 — Boston Harbor Ecology (4 hours); April 16 — Right Whale Quest, departs Plymouth (8 hours); May 21 — North Shore Islands (8 hours); June 18 — Great South Channel (overnight); July 16 — Whale and Bird Watch (6 hours); August 20 — Whale and Bird Watch (6 hours); September 17 — Evening Cruise, depart 11 p.m. (8 hours); October 15 — Maine Coast Cruises, depart Portland, Maine (3 days/2 nights); November 19 — Boston Harbor Ecology (4 hours) and December 17 Palagic Christmas Count (8 hours).

NEMH

Nutrition cooking classes

The foods we eat play a vital role in the way we feel, act and think. An improper diet can result in fatigue, disease, obesity and weight loss.

One of the keys in the fight against heart disease, America's number one killer, is a balanced diet that is low in fat and cholesterol.

You can learn to cook healthy and delicious meals in the Heart Healthy Cooking class at New England Memorial Hospital (NEMH) in Stoneham. Class members participate in cooking and tasting meatless dishes while learning more about nutrition. The course is led by a registered dietitian. The class is held Tuesdays, from 7 to 9 p.m. beginning February 2. The class meets in the home economics room of the Greater Boston Academy, located on the grounds of NEMH. The fee is $50. Preregistration is encouraged due to the limited class size.

For those interested in learning more about nutrition in general, NEMH offers the Basics of Nutrition course. Class members learn about proteins, fats, carbohydrates, vitamins and minerals. A science background is not necessary to learn about the science of nutrition. Continuing Education Units (CEU) will be awarded to nurses. A textbook is included in the course. The class is held Thursdays, from 10 a.m. to noon, beginning February 4. The course meets in function room No. 4 at the NEMH cafeteria. The fee is $75.

For more information, or to register for these classes, please call the NEMH Center for Health Promotion at 665-1740, ext. 426.

The Communications Revolution

Get ready for the 1990s and beyond: More than ever, experts say, communications will be the driving force behind virtually every business in an increasingly information-dependent, global economy. These days, even small businesses—businesses that want to grow bigger—demand the very best communications systems and services to transmit and receive information fast, reliably and with the greatest efficiency.

Many companies find they can increase profits and productivity with an electronic messaging service such as Telemail Plus℠ offered by Telenet Communications Corp., a US Sprint company that's a leading worldwide provider of data communications and electronic messaging services and products. It's widely used as a replacement for internal memos, courier services, long distance phone calls and facsimile services. Telemail Plus℠ lets you:

- Send and receive electronic messages 24 hours a day, using your own personal computer.
- Correspond with millions of worldwide telex users from your desktop.
- Deliver electronically input hard copy letters through the U.S. Postal Service.
- Access a variety of commercial and private, informational and educational data bases.
- Design customized forms and reporting formats without any programming skills. Link up with other electronic mail systems outside the Telenet network.

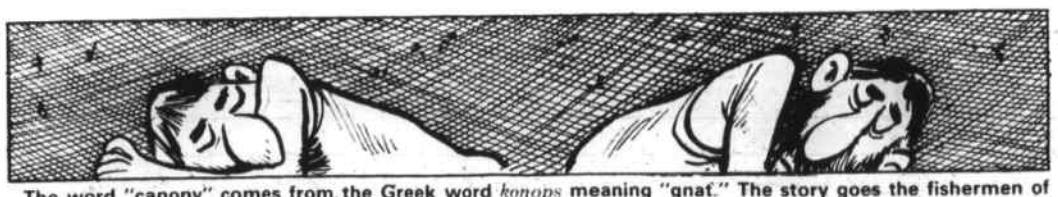

Today, information is power: A personal computer can send data around the world.

Telemail Plus℠ also lets business people gather sales data, enter and verify orders, manage inventories, file reports and distribute financial information throughout a company, across the country and around the world. The PC Telemail™ software package lets you create messages, memos and reports with the convenience of features such as a full-screen word processing editor. Pop-up menus are provided and you're always a keystroke away from on-line help screens and information.

Telenet has a pricing structure, with low monthly minimums geared to companies which do not yet have large numbers of users or high volumes of mail traffic. This allows these companies to take full advantage of all the features and benefits of the electronic mail service and become more competitive in the worldwide marketplace.

Thanks to the new communications technologies, many of today's smaller companies may become tomorrow's corporate giants, many experts predict. For free brochures, call 1-800-TELENET.

The word "canopy" comes from the Greek word konops meaning "gnat." The story goes the fishermen of ancient Egypt would sleep undisturbed by gnats by sleeping under canopies of fishing nets.
